Breaking Summer Habits

Sliding away from it all! Sedat Supergeci

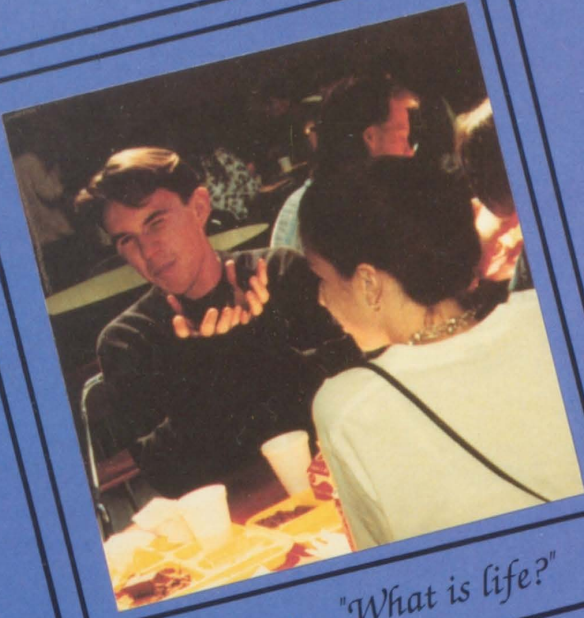

Tardy!?! Mr.Engerski

It was that time of the year again... Racket filled the once tranquil hallways as the buses and cars arrived. Some students were energetic and excited, while others were tired and trying to recollect where they actually were, hoping they were still on summer vacation and this whole thing was just a big nightmare. Whatever the case, this day was experienced by all—the first day of a brand new school year. Expressions like, “How was your summer?” or “I can’t believe school is here already,” were heard throughout the halls. As reality hits the students, they feel they need a way to rebel, so they begin “Breaking All the Rules.”

The energy and excitement on the first day of school slowly faded as students finally started to realize that school was in session. By this time, the students has a taste of what school would be like. Term papers, reports, and deadlines were just a few of the worries on the minds of students. Not only had the homework piled up, but the cold had set in which led to fun and games in the snow. The students were still adjusting to the school scene, but they got through it all by "Breaking all the Rules"

"Let it snow, let it snow, let it snow...." These words came to mind as Mother Nature brought forth an unexpected early snowfall.

With the air conditioning still on, students were dressing for an Alaskan dog sled race just to come to school. While some were already dragging out the thermal underwear, others were just taking time out to look at nature. "It seems that each year when the first snowfall hits, I forget about all of the headaches the snow caused the year before weather, and just look at how beautiful everything looks," commented Sylvia Groszek (12).

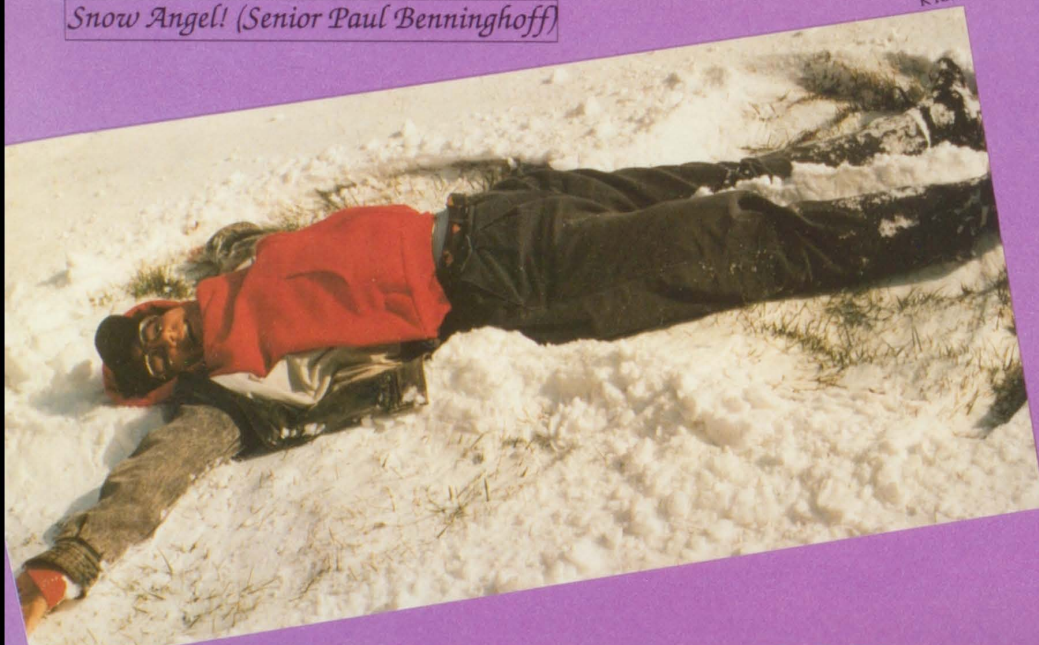

As the snow fell, students kept their frostbitten fingers crossed in hopes of a school delay or cancellation. It was a great time to revert back to childhood days of snowforts and hot chocolate. Sarah Donaldson (12) stated, "I don't mind the winter months, but I think the most exciting thing that happens is when school is called off, I get to sleep longer and then spend the entire day with my friends."

Snow fights make the heart grow fonder. (Senior couple Michelle White & Jason Reinhart)

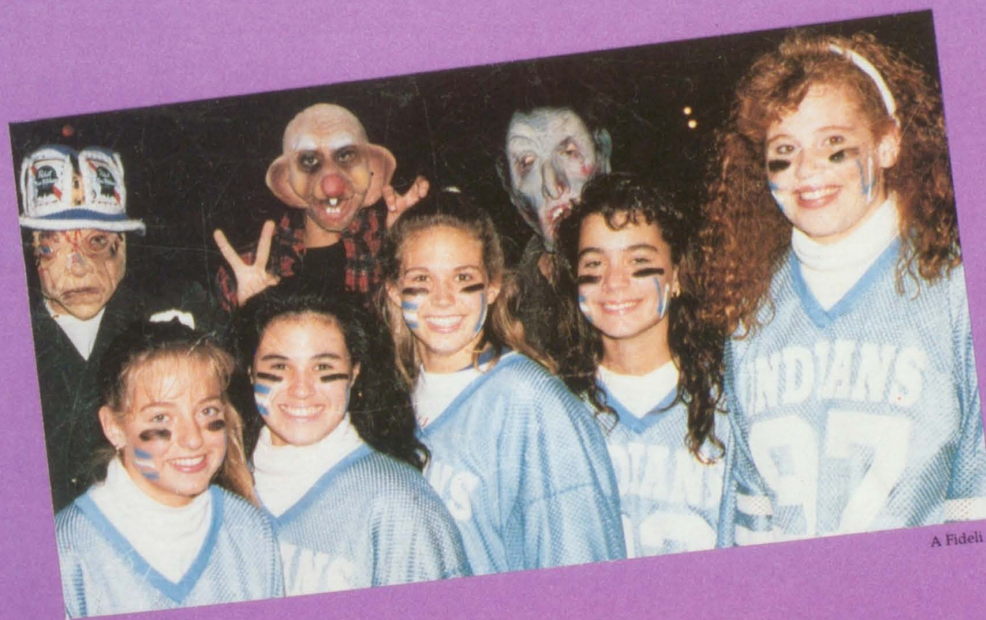

"It was a chance for my friends and I to go out, act stupid, and not feel dumb about it." (Dana Boller, 12) Description of a normal school day? No. Halloween was in the air and students were in the holiday spirit. "We ran from house to house, just like little kids, and fought over who was going to get the candy first." (Dana)

The thought of school didn't even discourage the holiday fanatic. Painted faces, orange and black attire, and for Josh Johnson (12) a quick raid through mom's closet, made the school day more bearable.

Not even the ever popular line, "Aren't you a little old to be trick or treating?" could bring down the determination of students on a quest for candy. They had their minds set on breaking the age barrier. "I will be going until I can no longer physically get up and go." (Jenn Rusk, 11)

Although the students were still trying to pass for those "cute little trick-or-treaters" and the adults were trying to stop them, everyone had fun. Leslie Fane (11) and friends decided to give back to all those generous enough to give them candy. "Instead of just saying 'trick-or-treat' we sang at the doors in three part harmony. It was great and people gave us even more candy because they enjoyed our serenade." --Does that really work?

Freezing temperatures, snow, ice, the flu... Everyone is at risk to catch some dreadful cold around this time of the year. Mid December triggers 'the flu season'. As student enrollment drops, late after school hours are becoming more and more popular. Teachers help students make up tests and assignments needed for completing semester grades.

Right around the corner awaits Christmas... time away from school is enjoyed by all. Over the holidays students relaxed and enjoyed 'the good life' by sleeping until 1:00 (or later) in the afternoon. Elly DeChantel, 12, said, "The vacation away from school gave me extra time with my friends and boyfriend and also allowed me to sleep as late as I wanted to!"

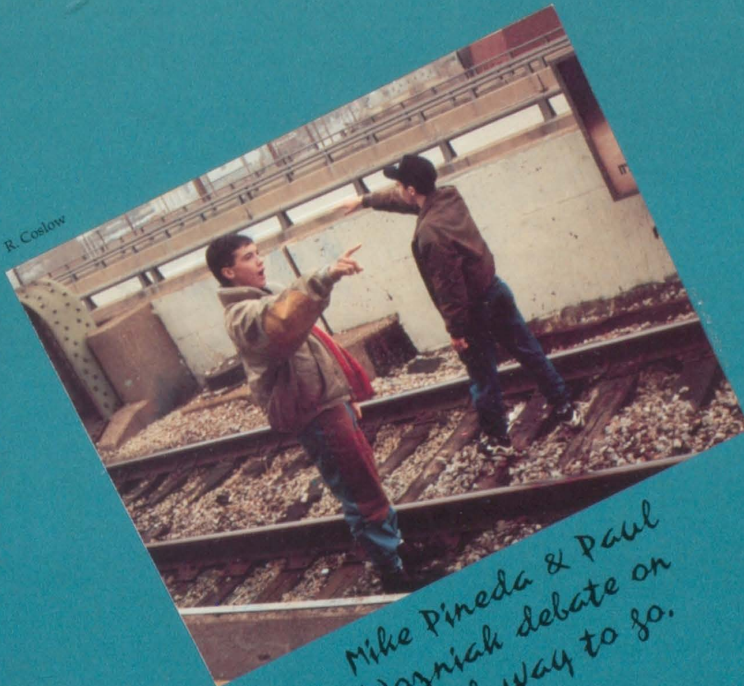

The responsibility of having an after school job put a damper on some students social lives. Julie Stewart, 12, comments, "Since I had to work both Saturday and Sunday until close, I couldn't really spend that much time with my friends."

For the lucky few, vacations came into the perspective. Trips to the states with never ending sunshine, Florida, California or Arizona could always be enjoyed. Especially during our cold winter months. Keri Costello, 12, traveled to the Grand Cayman Islands during Christmas break. Keri comments, "I thought it was pretty cool to get away for a week in the warm weather. I enjoyed my vacation because there was so much to do but I missed my friends on New Year's."

Whether you stay around home or go on a vacation during time off school, it's always enjoyed by all.

The sun was bright and the weather was right for enjoying the rippling blue waves. Many students took advantage of the warmth by participating in aquatic sports such as waterskiing or swimming. Jason Griffin, 12, claimed, "I go water skiing at Shafer Lake with my friends. It's an exciting sport."

Students would also water ski at Indiana beach with friends or family while staying in cottages.

When the weather turned colder, students replaced the summer water sports with winter sports such as snow mobil-

ing. As soon as there was enough snow on the ground, students geared up their snow mobiles and rode around in powdered open fields. Mountain and cross country skiing was a pleasure whenever weather permitted. Andrea Fidelli, 11, stated, "I usually go to Colorado with my family and friends to ski. Skiing is really a great escape from the norm." by Angie

Life after high school

Homework? Yeah right. Life is too short to stay at home and do school work. Besides, everyone knows homework was meant to be done on the bus before school or during first hour--if at all.

The final bell was the sound of freedom echoing through the hallway. School was officially over... until the next day. In the mean time, no one was safe from teenagers on a quest for fun. Those with cars were especially dangerous. The parking lot proved that. The rare breed who could get out of the parking lot with little or no physical or mental strain could be found anywhere there was food, friends, fun, and no adults. Until the alarm went off the next morning (for those who didn't stay up all night) the world was at their command.

Homecoming

The Dance

The homecoming dance was and always has been a night of excitement, laughter, love, and most of all - memories. Another word could've been used to describe the homecoming dance- rushed.

Many students felt that because of the cancellation of the game there wasn't a lot of time for football players, cheerleaders-even fans- to enjoy the night's festivities. Kris Gullickson, football player, 11, stated, "I think that the game should've been rescheduled to during the day. My girlfriend was really mad because she wanted to see me play, but she had to get ready for the dance that we got to spend a whole hour at! Whoever rescheduled the game for that time made a poor decision. The money and the time put into the dance was all for absolutely nothing."

Jodi Sherwood, cheerleader, 11, added, "It would've been better if the game was scheduled for a day that wasn't already packed with things to do. No one got to enjoy the game because everyone was busy getting ready for the dance. Then, the dance seemed like such a rush by the time the football team and cheerleaders got there that I felt the time couldn't even be enjoyed."

The other students who were uninformed with the game felt that the night went rather well. Kelly Linz, 12, commented, "I really liked the way that everything was set up. The decorations were really nice. There wasn't a lot of people there in the beginning, but once everyone arrived, it seemed everyone had a great time."

The Game

Students filed into the LC football field on Friday, October 4, with excitement and anticipation, eager for the biggest football game of the year: Homecoming. However, the excitement soon died when the game was postponed due to a rainstorm.

Then came the bigger disappointment: the game was to be played at 6:30pm on the same night as the homecoming dance, which would take place at 8:00pm. On the contrary, the homecoming crowd was very small to cheer the Fighting Indians on. Jeremy Martin, 12, stated, "It was wrong to put the game right before the dance- no one had enough time to get ready and there were hardly any people at the game."

Jim McAlpine, 12, commented, "It would've been much more logical to have the game in the day or the afternoon."

Jim Ward, 12, added, "I think having the dance at the same time as the game really killed the spirit of the game."

Another disappointment came during half-time: neither the homecoming court nor the float winners were announced. Andrea Paterson, 12, said, "I was really upset that they didn't even have the courtesy to announce the court or the float winners at the game for those of us who didn't go to the dance. I worked on the float just like everyone else and I had to wait to see if we won or not until the next day when I talked to some friends who had attended the dance. I know it may not seem like a big deal, but the whole weekend was just totally messed up."

Homecoming this year was just not the same. As Jeni Wegryzn commented, "Just because of a little rain, we were forced to break the tradition we've all become so accustomed to."

The game: Powder puff football.

The contestants: Dedicated juniors destined to lose because the game always seems to be "fixed" versus overconfident seniors with one year of experience who must win to keep tradition.

The weather: Subzero (give or take a degree).

The rules: Oh, there were some? — As long as the ref. doesn't see you... it's legal.

The practice: "If we had had footballs at practice that would have been a plus. When we were at Kahler, everyone including the sponsor, had to climb the fence to get in." (Marian Hensley)

The action: Karen Greinke led the junior attack with two touchdowns, one field goal, and one extra point.

The play of the game: "They put me out there against the whole senior line by myself. They fumbled the ball, so I guess I didn't do too bad." (Marian)

The overall reaction: (as stated by Jenn Rusk) "Rough, but fun. I was sore the next day."

The outcome: Juniors lose—AGAIN, but at least it was close this year.

The aftermath: "I had to clean my house after the seniors covered it in toilet paper." (Karen)

The prediction for next year: (as they say on opening day at Wrigley Field) "Maybe next year!" by Noreen

Can we pack 'em in or what?—(Ed, Jason, Eric, & Bryan)

The anticipation. The excitement. The freezing cold weather. The hope for victory. The nervous feeling in your stomach...It could be none other than the powder puff game.

With the weather somewhere around 20 degrees, imagine, if you will, what it felt like to be standing outside. I (and most everyone) thought four pairs of socks, and gloves would keep our blood circulating. A few people even bought insulated gloves with little heating packages in them- It didn't help.

The game began and so did the cheers. "Seniors, ooh, ahh! Seniors, ooh, ahh!" And, of course, the juniors tried to out cheer us. It nearly scared us to death when the juniors scored that first touchdown. Sarah Donaldson commented, "We had heard from everyone that the juniors were really bad. So we all expected the game to be really easy when, in fact, their offense was really good. It really caught us by surprise."

With touchdowns made by Tiffany Nelson and Brandi Schweitzer, the seniors won 31-27. Jill Schumacher stated, "I think the juniors played a good game, but the seniors took it away. I'm really glad I played; it was a lot of fun."

Afterwards, the seniors got together and T-Ped over 12 houses. It was a lot more fun than we thought. On our way to Jodi Sherwood's, I was leading the way, only to run out of gas on Main St. All 10 cars pulled over and pushed my car to safety. Talk about hilarious...

During the fall many students go to The Feast of The Hunters Moon either for extra credit in a history class or to realize how the Indians really lived.

Jodi Sherwood ,11, stated," I went to the feast because I received extra credit in my history class! It was pretty fun even though I stayed for about a half hour. I would go again but stay longer."

The feast comes around once a year near Purdue University. Students are able to see different crafts, guns and foods that were made during this time period.

Karen Plikuhn ,12, said," I thought the feast was pretty neat. I saw different handmade tools and ways on how the Indians really lived."

Students who go to the feast may enjoy taste testing the food or just watch the Indian Rain Dance. While other students would buy an assortment of beads and let their creativity go to work.

Gretchen Walters ,11, commented," I went because of educational experience, try the food, see different ways people use to live and go to the beads stand to get a lot of beads for necklaces."

Although the feast is only around for a few days, the students look forward to the next feast to stock up on beads or sample the food.

THANKSGIVING...and RECEIVING

For most, Thanksgiving is a time to sit down to a hearty meal with the family. For some, however, it is quite different. This year as with years in the past, concerned students joined together to help the less fortunate enjoy their Thanksgiving Day.

Students arrived in carloads at the Hammond American Legion around 9 a.m. When the first guests arrived only a few students started to help, but as time passed everyone began to participate. Some volunteers poured drinks, others helped carry the trays of food, choir members sang, and the rest just sat and listened to the homeless people's stories.

By the end of the day everyone had a soft spot for the homeless and realized just how desperate these people's situations really were. Toni Zona (11) and Mike Weaver (11) agreed they felt good knowing they helped others less fortunate, especially on a holiday. "It felt like they appreciated our time and that made it all worth it for me," stated Mike. Toni added, "It made me realize how many hungry people there are in this area and how many really need food."

TOY Drive STUDENTS PLAY SECRET Santa

KARYN

The Christmas Toy Drive is an event that gave students the opportunity to share their wealth with a child who wouldn't get very much under the tree otherwise.

Toy Drive sponsor, Ms. Toni Radio, distributed the names of needy children from all over the community to fourth hour classes. Students had a week to collect money, purchase and wrap presents. Reaching deep into their pockets and hearts, LC students found that it wasn't that difficult to achieve these goals.

It has been said that miracles don't happen. It has also been said that teenagers are not the people to look for when you are in need. This year and in many years past, LC has made miracles happen. Through the Toy Drive, students were able to share not only money and time but also a little Christmas Spirit.

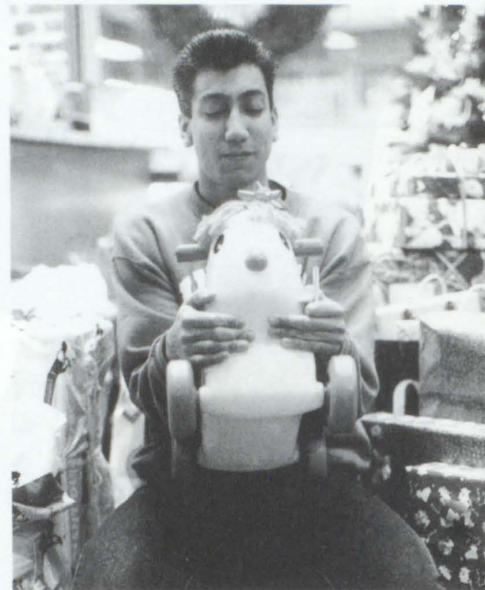

On Dec. 17 the presents were picked up and carried off to the awaiting children.

Christmas Art

Arriving during the season of Christmas, students were greeted with not only spirit and good cheer but holiday art murals throughout the main foyer. The LC art students painted Christmas designs in the office windows and in the main foyer after school to surprise their fellow classmates the following morning.

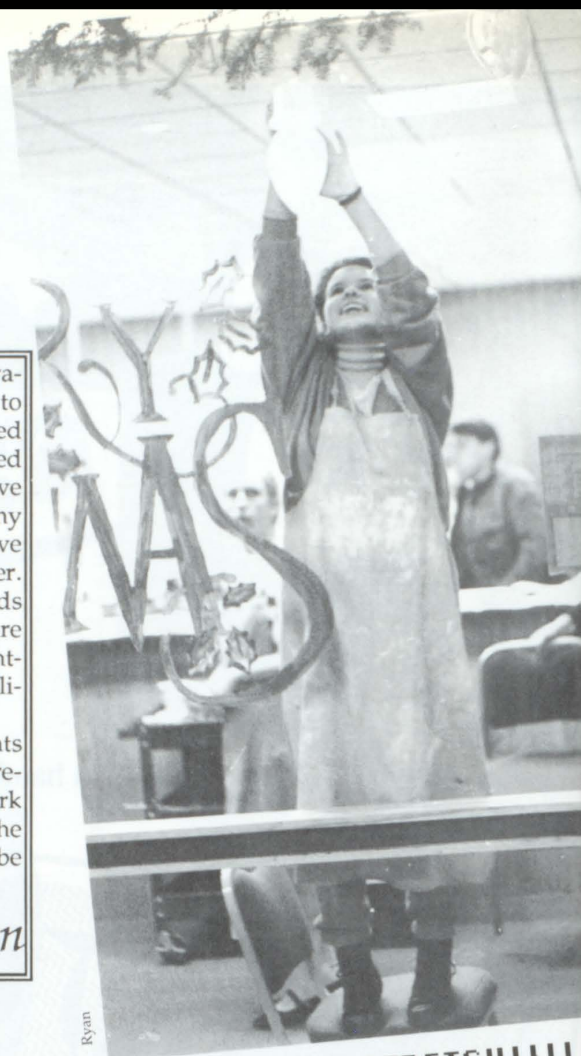

Mrs. Chris Gray and Mrs. Sandy Bushong headed this project. With the help of several generous students, these teachers were able to bring the Christmas mood to the entire school.

The students were not the only ones who showed appreciation towards the decorative windows. Visitors coming to and from the office commented that the school had never looked better. Many teachers who have been teaching at LC for many years commented, "We have never seen the office look better. It is really nice to see that kids honestly are willing to share their talents and time by brightening the place up on the holidays."

The efforts of the art students and teachers were greatly appreciated. Although the artwork was removed shortly after the Christmas holiday, they will be remembered.

My Buddy and Me

Whether it was at the bus stop or the front door, who was always there ready to greet you after a routine day at school? No, not Mom. It was that loyal companion with the wagging tail, soothing purr, ear-piercing squawk, or some other kind of greeting. Even if you had had the WORST of days, you could count on that "buddy, old pal" to bring a smile to your face.

Who else was willing to sit around to hear about the latest crisis you were in or, on a rare day, about something good that happened? The answer: The same creature that woke you up at 5:30 a.m. to go for a walk! by Michelle

"What game?"

Friday night game. LC fieldhouse, a.k.a. the "Wigwam." Students are engrossed in watching the game, right? WRONG! That would be the logical thing to do. After all, it is an athletic event. However, the main attraction at games was the opportunity to socialize with friends. "I come to football and basketball games to be with people that I haven't seen or talked to during the week, but I make sure I know the final score so my dad doesn't think I'm completely wrapped up in my social life," said one junior. The name of the game isn't football...It's Socialization 101! by Michelle

"JOSEPH" PLAYS "CHESS"?

LCTG again proved to themselves and to the community over the summer to be an excellent theatre group. The '91 summer season revived the family favorite biblical show, "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat" and performed the 1980's based, hard-core musical, "Chess," which told the story about the love and political wars between the United States and Russia through a series of chess matches.

Praying and luck was to be commended to the cast, crew, and most of all the orchestra of "Chess," for they were the first amateur theatre group to have ever performed the Broadway show. Although the majority of the company had no idea how to play the game of chess, performing it came naturally. Janell Cox (11) commented, "Being able to dance in such an involved and highly regarded musical was one of the greatest thrills of my summer."

On the lighter side, the story of the biblical life of Joseph and his 11 brothers was once again performed for the summer audiences. "Joseph" to those who doubled up and worked both summer shows agreed that "Joseph" was an escape from the seriousness of "Chess."

Jon Dulong (11), Potiphar/Baker, stated, "'Joseph' was one of the closest shows I have ever been involved with. Summer shows are great, because none of the pressures of school are there. You can concentrate totally on the show and your friendship with the cast." by Heather Hogan

Going out to eat with friends was something that many students enjoyed. Many would often start out their weekend by going out to dinner. Amy Hart, 12, stated, "My friends and I always get something to eat before actually going out anywhere."

Restaurants such as Paragon, Taco Bell, and Denny's were often visited by LC students. Subway had also become a new food trend for many students. Subway worker Karyn Keil, 12, said, "Usually after games, a big hoard of LC people come in and take over the place and as soon as things get quiet again, another big group piles in."

Students would also meet for lunch or breakfast on the weekends in order to catch up on the weekends activities.

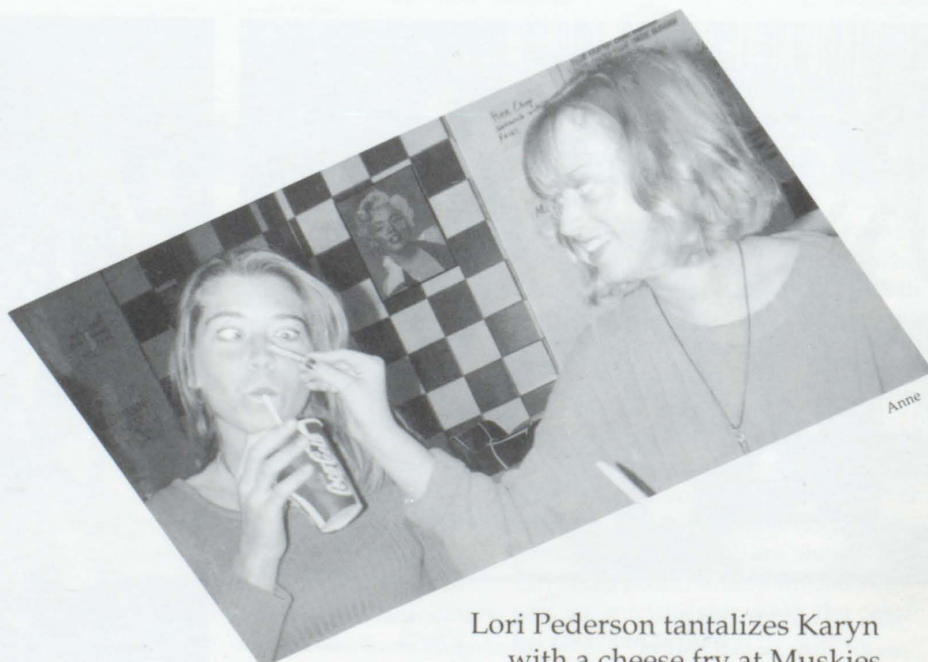

Many students enjoyed a cup of coffee once in awhile with close friends. Coffee drinkers often gathered to catch up on things or to see who else would show up at the particular restaurant they happen to be at. Jamie Sowa, 11, said, "My friends and I go out to coffee whenever we are bored and have nothing better to do. It's fun to talk about things over a hot cup of coffee."

As weekend nights would wind down students would often stop in at 'Round the Clock to get a late night snack or to just avoid going home early. Jenny Rash, 11, stated, "Going out to a restaurant is fun considering by the end of the night, I usually only have enough money for a cup of coffee." Many students could be found sitting wearily while recapping the nights events.

Bomb threat sends students home!!!

Usually students look for any excuse possible to escape from school even if it is only for a short time. A bomb threat doesn't exactly qualify as an excuse but it sure got students their day off school.

After the command from that friendly voice rang throughout the school, students were rounded up and hearded out into the cold. After close to an hour of freezing the remainder of the school day was cancelled.

Many students didn't let the fact that they missed lunch get them down. Several students ate outdoors while waiting for the bomb to go off...it never did!

Winter Formal

Winter Formal, February 8- it's 'the big day'. Waking up early Saturday morning doesn't seem so bad, considering the full day planned ahead. So many things to do... so little time. There are two different sides to this hectic day- the girls' side and the guys' side.

First on the agenda, for the girls, hit the salon at about 9:00 as they pamper themselves by getting their nails done and possibly tanning. Michelle Marthakis, 12, said, "I got my nails done because I wanted them to look perfect, so I got them done professionally." Next could apply to either guys or girls- picking up the flowers. Check and see if they are what you ordered, they look great! On the way home, you visualize in your mind a checklist of the necessities needed later to complete getting dressed: nylons, garter, jewelry, hair spray, makeup, etc. As you arrive home, glance at the clock, it's already 1:00! Throw the fresh flowers into the fridge and it's time for a nice, relaxing bubble bath (this will be the only relaxing part of a hectic day). As you get out of the tub, the phone is ringing off the hook. As you attempt to get ready, relatives are coming in and out of the house to see if you're ready yet. You reach perfection, the doorbell rings... it's 'the date'. And the rest of night you can relax.

As for the guys, the scenario is very different in many ways. Chris Lesniewski, 12, stated, "Guys really don't have any preparing to do until the day of the dance. That's when we have to wash the car, pick up flowers, shower, and put on our 'manly scents'." Todd Smith, 11, agrees, "It took me about 10 minutes to look smooth, but I'm glad it takes the girls longer because my date looked hot."

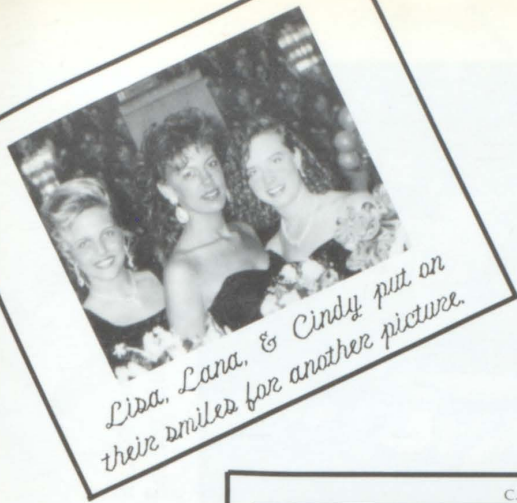

Many pictures are taken to capture the moment. However you prepare for the 'big day', odds are everyone looks their best.

$$$ Everybody spends

The phrases, "Can I borrow some money?" or "I can't go because I don't have any money" were often heard in the hallways of LC. In school, students dig through their purses and wallets in search of their last penny possible to pay for school lunches or candy sold by classmates. Students agree and believe the a la carte line is just too expensive. Jim Bishop, 11, commented, "The hot lunch price is decent, but the junk food is ridiculous." Jodi Sherwood, 11, added, "I think the a la carte line is too expensive. You only get three cheesesticks for $1.50—it's a rip!!

Students tend to spend much of their money on the weekend and other important things. For instance, going to the movies, out to eat, and gasoline for the car are just a few expenses. *To go out to eat at Burger King for two people, it's at least $8. *To fill a gas tank could run $10- $20 (or even more). *To go to the mall, and buy a shirt or tennis shoes. For example, a pair of Keds tennis shoes run about $28 ($20 on sale). *Clothing prices vary in every store. Department stores tend to be a tad higher than individually owned shops. Clothing prices also depend on the name of the brand you're buying, the quality of the material and the store you purchase the merchandise from. *At the movies, two tickets run about $12—unless you catch the early show before 6 P.M. then it's only $4 a ticket.

Granted, at certain times this year gas prices were high (and at times they were as low as 91 cents) Filling the tank in some cars or trucks is quite a chore and takes quite a chunk out of the old pocketbook. Going to the gas station is actually dreaded by some people. Paul MacDonald, 12, stated, "To fill the tank in 'The Chevy Truck' is certainly a chore."

While seniors have to pay the high amount for school lunches, they also have to buy their caps and gowns and tassel. Some seniors believe it is waste of money to buy their gowns to wear only once. Becky Poore, 12, said, "I don't think it is a waste of money to buy your cap and gown and stuff if you have a brother or sister 's you can use but, if not it is a waste of money since it will never be worn again."

Whatever you do with it, money is always spent somehow or another.

1992 Talent Show word!

What was the most talked about event on Jan. 30? What else could it be but the 1992 Talent Show which was put on the night before. Students came back to school after hours on a school night to join in the fun and most importantly to support freshman Ryan Gerlach.

Ryan earlier in the year underwent a bone marrow transplant which postponed his return to LC for the rest of the school year. Over 400 students attended the nine-act show which resulted in approximately $900 raised for him.

Heather Hogan (11) and Scott Bellis (12) emceed the event. All entries were judged by various LC teachers with the results being: first place- Delane Tubbs (12) for his performance to a Hammer Medley; second place- Leslie Fane (11) singing "Imagine" by John Lennon; third place- Paul Grafton (11) and Tim Fogle (11) rendition of "Just Like Heaven" by The Cure.

The Clique's lip-sync of "Hold On" by En Vogue gave the student audience a thrill, while Twice Dope and Bi Posse brought the crowd to their feet by rapping their original, "Who Ain't Got No Words?" LC band, Fossier Grims, also performed their original, "False Attire." Juniors Jennifer Rusk, Jackie Trippeer and Janell Cox, along with Bob Milausnic all got the audiences attention as well.

What more can be said about the Talent Show except a one-word phrase?...WORD!!!!!! by Heather Hogan

Finding and actually sitting in a seat stirred up a lot of heat from the crowd. Many came hours beforehand to witness the talent show.

SCENES from malls

Mall. Definition—Noun. Place where LC students converged in order to shop, work, and most of all "hang-out" on the weekends.

The "mall," what a great word! So many reasons to go there, so many not to. But for the most part, everyone made their way to Southlake or even River Oaks, if you can imagine, to actually go there, not for shopping, but for socializing. Did that really happen this year? Of course!

Socializing and cruising were a vital part of venturing out to the mall, but still many students had more reasons to go than just trying to get "picked up" and scoping out the crowds. Shopping, shopping, and more shopping for Homecoming, Winter Formal, and Prom became more evident as that time of the year rolled by. Getting that perfect dress and gorgeous tuxedo was a must, and where could one find everything and anything for those special occasions?—The Mall!!

For the underclassmen, like the ones that were before them, realized how "cool" the mall was, for you could see all the upperclassmen working at all the "fav" stores and not spend on dime!!

Hangin' out at the mall what a great concept for those who wanted to go there strictly for business and even for those who ventured out just for sheer pleasure!! by Heather and Angie

Disorderly Conduct

We all loved the troublemakers in our classes. You know-- the ones that made us laugh hysterically and totally got the teachers so mad they can hardly even talk and let alone teach! We all loved them, right?

Well, maybe not, but they still caught our attention anyway. The crazy thing was that in the beginning of the year almost everyone could spot out who they thought were going to be the "troublemakers." Maybe it was because they ran (or actually dove) into the seats in the back of the class (which seems to be the place where they always gravitate).

C Wilson

What makes them so appealing some days? Is it the bad boy/girl image of going over the limit and never looking back that is so often portrayed in almost every movie and t.v. show? Or is it just we are so envious of the actors and actresses on the screen that have enough guts to do whatever they want whenever? Whatever it is, they will still be here for no other reason than to keep the principals on their toes. by Heather Hogan

How many times have you had the urge to just 'hop on up' on the waterfountains? Many I suppose, right? Well, Mike Rupp, 11, definitely felt like 'breaking all of the rules' when no one was around except a camera that caught him in the act. No matter, Rupp remains calm and cool.

LCTG bonds together

This year LCTG presented "The Curious Savage" by John Patrick to audiences during the month of November.

This comical escape portrayed Leslie Fane (11) as Ethyl P. Savage, an older women who is unwillingly placed into the Cloisters by her three obnoxious, greedy children: Jason Salas (12), Janell Cox (11) and Jon Dulong (11).

In this place where the outside world is locked out from the inside, Mrs. Savage encounters several eccentric characters that have problems of their own. For instance, the youngest of the cast, Fairy Mae (Dana Jones, 10) and Anthony (Kyle Ross, 10) are trying to overcome their upsetting past of their childhood. Christy Reynolds (12), who portrays Florence, the loving mother of her disease-stricken son, contrasts Sue Skup's (12) character, Mrs. Paddy, who hates everything in the world and wants everyone to know it.

Other contrasting characters include the fired mathematician, Hannibal (Jason Utesch, 10) who thinks he can play a musical instrument and the ex-WWII pilot, Jeff (Michael Chapter, 11) who really can play a musical instrument.

Neutral to both the outside and the inside worlds are the staff members, Dr. Emmett (Chad Pirowski, 12) and Miss Willie (Heather Hogan, 11), who try helping and soothe the situations to maintain order in the utter confusions during the show.

Each character had a specific appeal that came out onstage. Jones felt acting was a great escape from the everyday scene. "The stage has always been my 'other world.'"

Together, the cast and crew made "The Curious Savage" a show to be proud of. Craig Kennedy (11) further explained, "Everyone seemed to work well with each other." by Heather Hogan

Many talents at LC have remained hidden until last year. Bands such as "I, Sharko," "Skunkd Brew," "Fosser Grims," and "Twice Dope" emerged into the music scene. These talented musicians usually performed at parties or for friends.

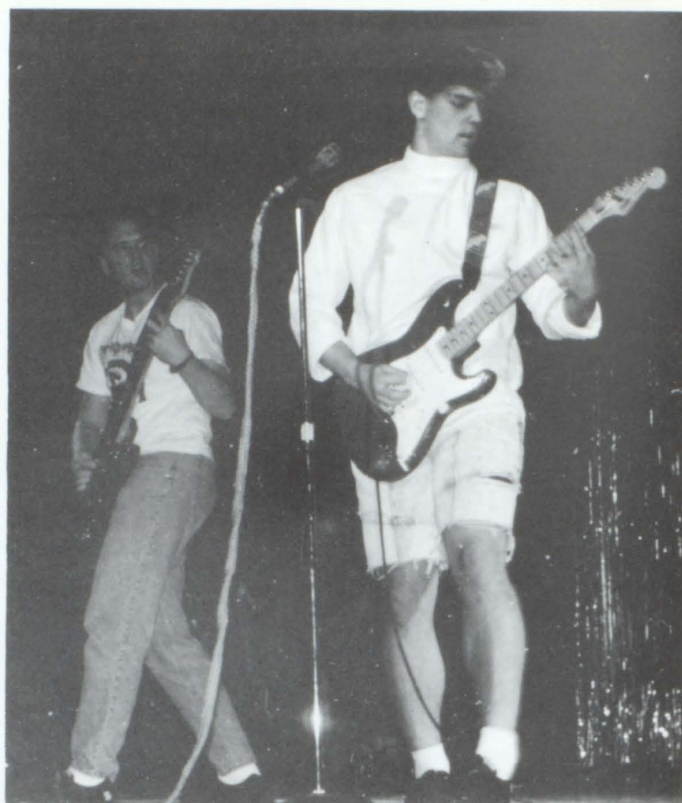

Derek Cullimore, Paul Grafton and Tim Fogle of "I, SHARKO" played together on and off for two years. Derek sang and played guitar along with Paul who also sang. Tim played various percussion instruments. "I, SHARKO" has opened for Psycho Reggae.

"Skunkd Brew" may be the name of the band, but it certainly does not describe the sound of their music. Ryan Anderson had vocals, Jason Taylor and Jim Bishop played guitar, Mark Beall played bass, and Chris Janus played drums.

"Fosser Grims," which translates as "Enchanted Beings" has played together since September. Vocals and lead guitar were done by Chris. Adam played the rythm guitar with Mike Kostecka on bass and Jason Hunt on drums.

The rap group "Twice Dope" consisted of Tony Bailey and Joel Stengel proved that "Rap isn't just a black thing." Although their inspiration was "Third Base" Joel and Tony wrote all of their own music. The goal of "Twice Dope" is to one day make it professionally.

Even though these bands had just gotten their start, they have the potential to take their talent to the top. By Meghan Diekman

Slumber Party

A nap made for two.

Time to go home and get some sleep.

Pillows, sleeping bags, staying up into the "wee" hours of the morning... when the words "slumber party" are mentioned, these are the words that pop into one's mind.

Slumber parties were a popular way for high school kids to "take a break" from the many pressures of life. Even guys took time on the weekend and described it as "male-bonding".

During most girl slumber parties people talked, listened to music, and watched movies. Most guys played pool or cards.

Many people said these "weekend get-aways" were a great "stress releaser".

Inexperience seemed to be the term used most often to describe the football team. With only two returning starters, the team had much rebuilding to do. By the end of the season, the team had pulled together to prove that they weren't as defenseless as had been thought. "By the end of the season, both the defense and the offense had improved drastically," stated senior Nathan Davis.

An important role was played by the juniors. Jim Bishop, 11, stated, "A lot of juniors were playing Varsity for the first time."

Despite the rough times, the team refused to give up. Nick Beideman, 11, said, "We had spirit and pride, even if we didn't win all of the time."

Matt Harger, 11, commented, "Everybody had doubts about us at first. But, I think we proved them wrong when we played well against teams that nobody thought we could beat."

Next year's expectations are good. Kyle Woods, 11, concluded, "Our hopes are very high for next season--they have to be when you have so many players returning."

Practice makes perfect

There was a price for everything, and the price for athletic success was practice --lots of it. Soon after the spring sports had finished their seasons, athletes involved in fall sports sprang into their late summer practices.

Football players spent their final weeks of vacation in training. Days were spent in preparation. "To be successful, you must prepare yourself mentally and physically. There was not a single game of the season that I felt before the game that we were going to lose," stated Nathan Davis, 12.

Cross-country, another of the fall sports, jumped the gun and started running before the school year's start.

Some sports had started before the first week of school; girls' golf had already competed in three meets.

Sometimes it was necessary for athletes to spend many hours after official practices to improve their skills. Quinn Cusson, 10, took time to "practice with my brother" on his own time.

With a team of only six members--five of whom were sophomores--the girls' golf team faced a tough season. As their 5-7 record indicates, the team did better than anticipated.

A main objective of the team was to overcome its problems with inconsistency. Kelly Stiglitz, 10, commented, "If I could get my scores down and my game more in sync, I'd be in great shape!" Field exercises were important. Alys Haller, 10, stated, "We spent a lot of time hitting range balls, chipping, putting, and playing 9-holes."

Though afterschool and weekend practices helped some, the competition was just too tough. "The Valpo-Crown Point match was difficult. Both teams have players that are really good," commented Alys.

The team's concentration was on having fun and trying their best. "It really bothers me when people I am playing against cheat. I caught many of my opponents trying to shave strokes. If a person can't play honestly then he doesn't deserve to win," felt Kyle Freeland, 10.

The prospects for next year's team are hopeful. As Jennie Sudac, 10, stated, "Since there will be five returning members to lead the team, it won't be much of a challenge."

Senior Cross Country

With only two returning seniors to the boys' cross-country team, the expectations for the season were uncertain. The team was dependent upon strength from the underclassmen.

Sean Kennedy, 9, said, "The team was very supportive. We all worked together. As a freshman, I felt confident on the team."

Seniors Jim Ward and Marc Spiller led the team. Jim added, "It was a growing season. We worked to improve the underclass so that they will be stronger in the future."

Marc commented, "The team should do pretty well next year. Everyone worked well together." "The cooperation among teammates allowed them to compete against tougher and stronger teams."

Preparation for a race involved much more than simply working-out and running. "Preparing for a meet included practice and determination. They are the two keys to winning," added Sean.

Rookie-of-the-Year, Chris Hernandez, 9, stated, "The toughest race of the season was definitely the Regional meet at Lemon Lake. It had just rained and there were puddles about six inches deep on the course."

In the beginning, it seemed as though it would be a growing year for the girls' cross-country team. But, the team definitely reached full potential by the end of the season.

With much talent coming from the underclassmen, the team finished the season placing second in sectionals, qualifying for regionals, where they placed fifth. Brandy Neitzel, 9, stated, "Being a freshman, I was afraid at first. I had a lot of fun. Hopefully next year we will work harder as a team and accomplish more."

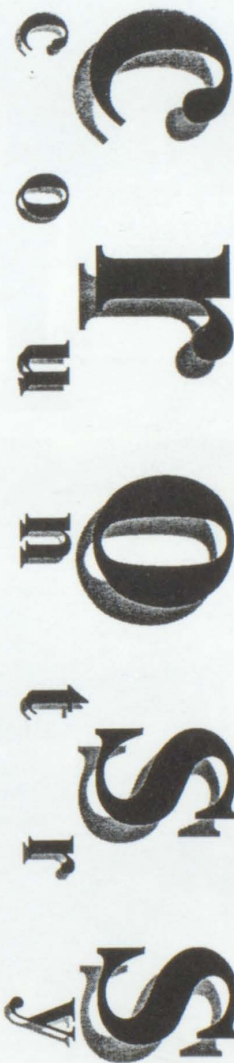

Junior Beth Beigelbeck continued to perform well for the Indians. "It was a good year," she stated, "we were strong. Hopefully we'll continue to grow as a team and become even stronger next year."

Kelly Thrall, 12, made a valuable turn around. "I never gave up. I kept working hard, I had a positive attitude, and I reached my goal."

Carrie Stephens, 10, Tara Morales, 12, Bonnie Levin, 9, Lori Matulis, 12, and Lori Brister, 10 were named members of the Sectional and Regional qualifying teams.

Mary Przeborowski, 11, said, "We were a young team, but we matured greatly during the season."

Senior's Tennis

Boys' tennis had a few new additions to their team including freshmen Kevin Dillon, Summit Tickoo and new Coach Mr. Michael Overmeyer. Some members believed that was the reason for their off season, which ended with five wins and eight losses.

Bryan Furuness, 11, stated, "Our season was basically a rebuilding season. Having a new coach and underclassmen that dominated the team made us struggle in parts and we never fulfilled our potential."

The team tried to correct any problems they may have observed by playing with a friend on their free time or even staying after practice to work on serves.

Ryan Koslow, 10, commented, "Some of us worked on improving trouble spots during the off season."

Quinn Cusson, 11, added, "I prepared by practicing with my brother."

To sum up the season, Rhetick Sengupta, 12, stated, "It was a lot of fun. I really liked our new coach Mike Overmeyer and our assistant, Ralph Holden. The team members were all friends, and although we didn't have a great record, the season was worthwhile."

The Varsity Volleyball team ended their season 16 and 14. The varsity team had returning seniors Amy Gelon; Leanne Saker; Denise Kulig; Sue DeVries, Varsity MVP; Sandy Lazowski, who received Honorable Mention Award; and Cara Greene, Second Team All Conference. The team had a good season, but teammates believed it could have been better if they had communicated more and worked harder.

Cara Greene, 12, stated, "The season went okay, but we should have been better with the experience we had on the team."

Leanne Saker, 12, said, "Our main problem was communication. In volleyball that is so important! Also, I pulled a muscle during try outs. This made me slow when I could play."

Although they finished fourth in Conference, the girls had a memorable season.

Janice Marshall, 11, said, "Beating Chesterton was the most memorable moment because they had only lost a couple of games."

Memorable moments varied from player to player. Sue DeVries, 12, contributed, "Finally being on a team without fighting and arguing. It was nice not to have to deal with that junk, especially as a captain. We all got along very well."

The girls' swimming season had a theme of determination. The team was known for its long--and often early practices. Their hard work paid off. Due to their large and strong team, the girls placed first in both Conference and Sectionals and traveled to the state finals.

Experience was a key factor in the team's success. With a large number of returning swimmers, the team was at an advantage. "Many of the returning girls had improved from last year, and the number of freshman who had previous experience helped a lot," observed Julie Jacobson, 11.

Team spirit and attitude also played an important role in the team's success. Junior Cyndi Barnes commented, "Our team became very close this year and everybody had a real positive attitude."

The strength of the competition and the importance of the meet often weighed heavily on swimmers' minds. Jen Friermood, 12, stated, "Sectional finals made me so nervous. The stress I felt that day was unbelievable."

Not only were there team rewards, but perhaps more precious, were the individual victories. "Just beating my time from last season was my biggest goal," said junior Jamie Kopeck.

PEOPLE BUILDING THE FUTURE

On the job. In the community.

Living another life... students at work.

In the life of most teenagers today, work, is a portion of their world. By working, students learn how to provide for themselves, but this isn't always an easy task. Different people, a different environment, another life, is what work is; as some students put it. How do we cope?

Living another life away from that already difficult school life is what many LC students do once they leave the parking lot at 2:05 p.m. Laura DeGraaff (12), a waitress at Minner Dunn, commented on students working. "I feel my job gives me a sense of responsibility by not only going to school and trying to maintain good grades, but providing me with the training to deal with people out in the real world," commented DeGraaff.

"My job provides me with spending money for the weekends, since my mom and dad gave up on giving me money for that purpose," said, Mike Markowski (12). Along with the word 'student', the word 'work' eventually follows. Work is another lesson, other than our parents, to teach us priorities and responsibilities. by Nikki Graham

Spring Break '92

Palm trees, white sand beaches, the smell of suntan oil on darkening bodies; these wonderful delights conjure up images of an exotic paradise. Since Northwest Indiana isn't exactly Paradise Lost, the closest most of us can get to tropical beaches is to fall asleep and dream about it (usually in the middle of Lit. class while reading "Moby Dick").

Usually towards the end of February, students can be seen walking the halls with a dreamy look in their eyes. Is it love? A severe case of pink eye? No sir! It's...SPRING FEVER!! It's the time of year when we're still wearing jeans and sweaters to school but deep down inside all we really want to do is get away from it all, lay in the sun and fry our brains.

ISTEPS, term papers and college applications seem to be reason enough to run away. Coupled with yucky weather and the fact that there is absolutely nothing to do around here, many students are looking forward to Spring Break. Junior Kyle Cusson shared his dreams, "My ultimate Spring Break fantasy is to go to Australia, meet a beautiful Australian woman, and hang around looking like one of these Crocodile Dundee type people, but actually, all I'm really going to do is sit at home and sleep." Sorry Kyle, better luck next year.

BREAKING TRADITION

Junior, Anna Standerfer carves pumpkins with boyfriend Donny Farmer.

Cuddly couples holding hands and noisy groups of friends were common sights in the halls of LC. School, for the most part, had a double purpose. The most obvious was to provide an education so that we may all grow up and be useful members of society etc., etc... The second purpose was to provide a place to develop social skills (in other words to get to know people and make friends). Where else could one find a place filled with 2,000 people who are relatively the same age? (Give or take a year or two).

Surely, with all those personality combos there must be someone for everyone. Yet, some students found that they had a better time hanging out with or dating people who attended different schools or who have already graduated. Junior Amy Basinski fell into this category. "My boyfriend and most of my friends live in Illinois. It isn't that I don't like the people out here, it's just that I grew up in Illinois and I feel more comfortable out there."

Extra-curricular activities are ways of meeting different people. Jon DuLong '11 explained, "Some of my closest friends are LC graduates whom I met while working on LCTG productions." Senior Jill Schumacher met her boyfriend when he was a member of the LC hockey team and she was a die-hard hockey fan. She commented, "Even though I see Scott fairly often it's still hard not having him at school everyday."

Whether it's hearts, promises or rules; LC students are experts at breaking tradition.

Stress with deadlines, stories, pictures and layouts— that's just to name a few things that are felt by the staffs of Quiver, Scout and Rune. They were the three publications produced at LC.

Quiver: the yearbook. The year is filled with deadlines that need to be met in order for our book to be produced. Students on staff run around pushing photographers to shoot more pictures for their pages. The Macintosh computers are being used all hour by staff to complete details needed for their pages.

Scout: the newspaper. The paper comes out every other week. Scout staff always works hard trying to keep up with the recent news. Stress from deadlines is felt tremendously by Scout due to having a deadline about every week.

Rune: the literary magazine. The staff works hard after school hours to create this publication. Rune consists of poems, artwork and stories written or drawn by students here at LC. Rune comes out one time during the year. Rachel Ganter, 11, said, "Our literary magazine gives students a different way of expressing themselves. I also enjoy working with the other students involved in Rune."

Take me out to the ball game-- if you can afford the tickets! With all the players re-negotiating for millions of dollars the ticket prices were bound to go up-- and they did. Fortunately, this didn't stop students from going. Chicago Bulls, Hawks, Sox, Cubs, Bears, and Power. The only problem was finding a team to root for-- or against. SOX fans and Cubs fans always put on a good show when the Windy City Classic came around. Never the less, games were always fun with friends and friends were always willing to get you out of that jam if you had that coveted "one extra ticket."

After Midnight

Have you ever looked at the clock and said, "It's 10, only two more hours until home." It seems like only five minutes later the clock says 11:59 and you have a 12 curfew? This may sometimes happen, but if you think about it, if something's going on and you're staying out of trouble why can't you just come home at a decent time? Besides, sometimes the fun doesn't really begin til After Midnight.

The late night mind thinkers might be caught playing cards or a board game while the adventurers are out T'Ping or seeking excitement. The mellow crowd usually hangs out with their 20 closest friends watching a movie or just chatting and the hyper socializers will be jumping around, dancing and partying with a house full. On the other hand, if your curfew is midnight, you may lose out on some of the late night activity unless you decide to break curfew! It's 12 do you know where your parents are???

"What do you want to be when you grow up?" Those who aren't sure avoid the question while others face the challenge. Home Ec and MPC were clubs that worked to build the foundations for tomorrow's future... today. Students in Home Ec gained experience in matters such as how to get along with mom. Mother daughter dinners and get togethers were planned and many field trips were taken.

Those involved in MPC were planning for a different sort of future-- one in the medical field. Interested club members attended workshops and listened to speakers to learn more about their respective fields of medicine. While some wanted to work in Pediatrics others were going for the "big" money under the title of Heart Surgeon. Those interested in missing a day of school (like who wasn't) assisted Red Cross members in the annual Blood Drive.

MIND OVER MATTER

Most clubs at LC were strictly there to sponsor dances or a place to go on club periods, but not the Academic Superbowl, Academic Decathlon, and Future Problem Solving teams. Since these clubs met after school, not in, many shrugged and asked, "Now what club are you in?"

The members would answer either "Academic Decathlon," "Superbowl," or "Future Problem Solving."

"That's nice," the questioner would reply.

Not many actually realized what all went into these clubs. Rather than running around a track or shooting baskets, the members of these organizations pushed their brains to the limit, not their bodies.

All of the club members worked together not only to make a name for themselves, but for the school as well. Standards were set high for these clubs to succeed, and because of their right frame of mind all of their challenges were met. by Heather Hogan

Class Cabinets

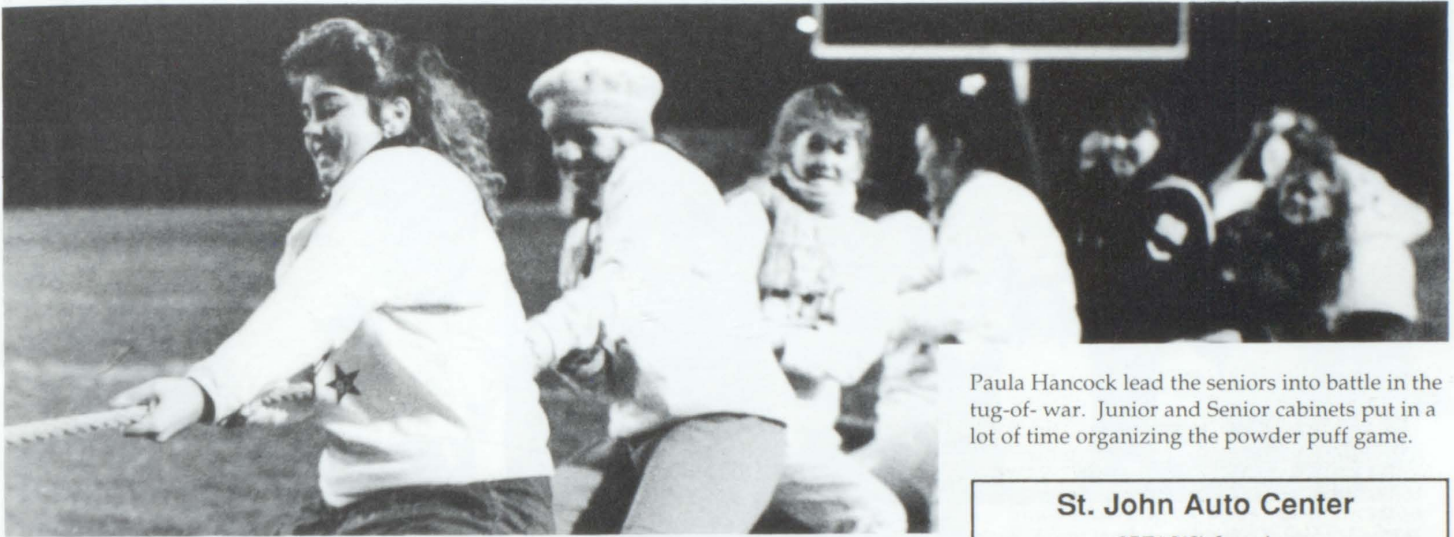

LC offered its students quite a few extracurricular activities. Some of the best memories that kids have are from school dances. There were three major dances this year and a special banquet for the seniors. Each of the classes was responsible for planning one of these activities, and that's where the Class Cabinets came in. Jen LaBuda, 12, said, "Being president puts some pressure on me, but it's also a lot of fun."

Each Class Cabinet raised money through fundraisers in order to make the evening as nice as possible. Dave York, 11, said, "We think the seniors deserve a good prom, so we saved quite a bit of money."

The money for Class Cabinets was made through the sales of candy bars and other novelties.

Students usually joined Class Cabinets in order to get involved and meet new people. Kira Meinzer, 10, said, "I really enjoy the people I've met, and I like being able to say that I helped make the important decisions in our school."

Paula Hancock lead the seniors into battle in the tug-of-war. Junior and Senior cabinets put in a lot of time organizing the powder puff game.

Sophomore float building meetings often ended up in plaster fights. Sophs, this year, tied seniors for first place in the float competition.

Academic Letterwinners

Students worked hard to excel and achieve in academics throughout their four years in high school, and LC congratulated students for their accomplishments. Students reaching at least a 3.9 GPA for a semester received letters and were invited to join academic letterwinners. Those students got together to plan activities in which they could all participate. Amy Becklenberg, 12, said, "I am proud to be a part of academic letterwinners because it lets me know that all my hard work has paid off."

Chad Pirowski, 12, admits, "Being in letterwinners earns me the respect that I want, especially with college coming up. It looks good on a college application and it is a way to recognize the people who spend a lot of time trying to excel."

Too many adults say, "I wish I were in high school again." Life isn't as easy as it used to be in a society where drugs, alcohol, and broken homes are more common and more acceptable. All the wrong reasons seem right and "breaking all the rules" is ok. Not always. Impact, Peer Helpers, and SADD worked to set the new example. Students helping students help themselves and others became the standard.

While SADD was constituting a "contract for life" to improve parent/teen relations where alcohol use was concerned, Impact and Peer Helpers were working with more personal and centered problems. The trust gained by Impact and Peer Helpers from the student population gave troubled students the courage to step forward. This Student Recovery Group is not only an example of what dedicated teenagers are capable of establishing, but also a "safe place" for those who need support in taking that first step in a positive direction. Moving forward in the fight against drunk driving, SADD made the job of the designated driver look "cool." Congratulations-- and thanks for looking out for us!

Hard Work Pays

By Amy Basinski

Students have shown leadership abilities in two different ways: through sports or school involvement. That's why LC offers National Honors Society and Athletic Letterwinners.

NHS honored students for academics as well as leadership. The kids were nominated at the end of their junior year and inducted into the club their senior year. Once involved in NHS, the students raise money through fundraisers to donate to the charity of their choice. Amy Becklenberg (12) said, "I feel that NHS has been a positive experience, and I hope many other students will have the chance to earn membership."

Students that have excelled in the sport of their choice and have earned a letter are invited into athletic letterwinners. These athletes then participate in group activities such as bike rides, Sox games, and giving new members their letters and chevrons. Ryan Anderson (12) stated, "Athletic letterwinners gives all the athletes a chance to get together and find out about each other."

New groups formed to help raise the spirits of LC teams. Among the new groups the Spirit Team, a modern dance group, was formed. They performed during the girls' basketball games and created their own routines. Missy Blissmer, 12, states, "This gave me a chance to do something I really love. The team was a great experience." Also, new cheerleaders were formed to help encourage the team adding to the excitement. Both new groups proved to be very beneficial. As for the original cheerleaders, they still worked their hardest to represent LC and to present their best work. Kim Bland, 12, states, "All of us are such great friends, enabling us to work well together and enjoy ourselves. I feel that we have played a big part in our school." Their dedication paid off with impressive winning seasons. Thanks to many school spirited people, LC teams had the incentive to win.

Ecology Club Breaking Ground

Lori

Ecology club breaks ground and plants a tree to help the earth.

At the start of the year, Mary Bates was hit cold in the face by problems arising from her new club. She was interested in starting an ecology club to make students more aware of the damage being done to the earth and wildlife. The first problem Mary was confronted with was the fact that we were unable to find a sponsor. Who really needed a sponsor? Well administrations said that "we must have one" so off we went on a crusade for someone, anyone who would sit quietly at our meetings. Mary usually likes to run things on her own and unlike most people is extremely good at it so she did not want someone trying to control things.

We finally found Mrs. Freeman. Little did she know exactly what she would be taking on when she had Kim, Susan, Lori, Anne, Mary and I all together trying to master mind a job.

Mary's club finally got underway in trying to change the world (or at least a part of it).

We started meeting on club days which are seldom in itself and after a while we started to realize that half of the kids in the club were merely interested in getting out of class, not planting trees and recycling paper.

The few that were interested in ecology went about trying to help where they could. We planted a tree in front of the school. (Oh! By the way it died. It was the thought and effort that counted, right?)

Then came earth week and yours truly was put in charge of that. Plans really didn't go as I had wanted them to but we had fun and things got done. I still liked the idea of wearing earth oriented clothes but apparently Juliet and I were the only two who entertained that idea because it never really took to flight. Good job Mary!!

MARCHING

CONCERT

Band camp marked the beginning of a new year for band members. It also marked the last year of band for seniors and the first for freshmen. A time to work hard on the show and a time to adjust to the others in the group. When band camp ended the hard work remained, with practice not only during class but after school as well.

At the first competition at Highland the band placed first. Carrie Winkler, 12, stated "Winning the Highland invitational boosted everyone's confidence. Winning the first competition of the season got everyone excited to go and compete in other competitions." After this happened, the band continued to do well. The band season ended with an eighth place finish at Regionals. Everyone agreed Regionals was the most challenging competition for the band during the marching season. Many bandsmen agreed Regionals was challenging because the band had a chance at going to state.

Marching season was the part of the year everyone enjoyed most. Danise Ellenwood, 11, stated that she liked marching season because "You get to make so many friends and work with everyone to put together a show stopping production on for contest." Marching season involved traveling, meeting people from other schools and just a lot of fun!

When marching season came to a close the band moved on. Separated into two classes, wind ensemble and symphony band was formed. Wind ensemble was filled with seniors, juniors and some sophomores, while symphony band was made up of some sophomores and mostly freshmen.

Tragedy struck LC bands on December 10, 1992 when Mr. Barmore resigned. Ms. Hobbs as assistant director took over for him immediately the following day. The bands had adjusted well to the change in directors. Their next concert was a great success. Jason Moon, 10, said "Mr. Barmore was an excellent director I really admired him. Ms. Hobbs is very brave taking on the responsibilities she did, and I really admire her for that."

CHOIR

The choirs and show choirs had a successful year. For all students involved in the ISSMA, (Indiana State School Music Association) contest, did a tremendous job. At the ISSMA contest held at LC, our choral department had fourteen of fourteen division entrants take home first place medals. All students receiving first place ratings, were able to advance to semi-state ISSMA which was held in Indianapolis.

Four perfect scores were awarded there. The four large choirs were involved in ISSMA also. They were awarded three first place, and one second place medal.

All of the choirs put much time and effort into fundraising. Concert Choir and Senior Girl's choirs participated in and choir festival and contest at Hershey Park in Hershey, Pennsylvania on Memorial Day weekend.

Lively Casts Take on Gobbledygooks

Since the beginning of the year, two all-high school shows have been produced, performed and remembered for all the time and energy put into "The Curious Savage" and "On the 20th Century." Although many of the thespians were not involved in the school shows, whenever they came as an audience member feelings rekindled of how they felt when they were involved with the summer show, "Chess" and "Joseph," or the others that they found themselves at home with.

Thespians have always considered

The masculine Steve Kitts and the "sexiest sophomore", Kyle Ross cleaning?

each show as a different "family" of its own, and it is true, for more time was spent in the back hallways and classrooms of the LC theater than at their own home. As families sometimes break apart, so does a LCTG show, but always there is the memories of the good and bad times shared by all.

The actors, "techies" and the pitt, even though they came from different cliques outside of theatre, inside they all worked together as one and "birthed" a new show and made it their own. by Heather Hogan

SKATIN' AT NOIRE DAME

H. Balka

ICE HOCKEY

The LC hockey team had many changes this past season, including a new coach, moving from a club to a LC sport and adding new rules. Since Varsity hockey has become known as a sport they were to follow certain restrictions. No longer were they allowed to drive to away games. A bus was provided to take all players to and from the game. This was beneficial to some players but caused a team problem riding the bus according to Jim Slusarczyk.

Nate Jazyk said, "The coaching and the teams overall moral improved this season."

The season went well for the Skatin Indians. They placed third in conference and the top two teams were undefeated. Eric Popa predicted they would have a good season after they played Bishop Noll and won.

Jim stated, "The team came together when we skated with the same line."

At the state hockey tournament the Indians placed sixth. They were hoping for a better outcome because next season will be a tough one due to the loss of many seniors and the league getting more competitive.

Jason Griffin commented, "We had an all right season, but we could have achieved much more."

WINNERS

The wrestling team almost completely started over this year. They were young and inexperienced. It was to be a "growing year" for the Indians. Brandon Burbage, 11, stated "Next year the Indians will be a definite force to be delt with."

Most team members agreed that winning Sectionals was their most memorable moment. According to Aaron Phelps, 10, "Winning Sectional was a great accomplishment for the whole team. It was also a great personal achievement."

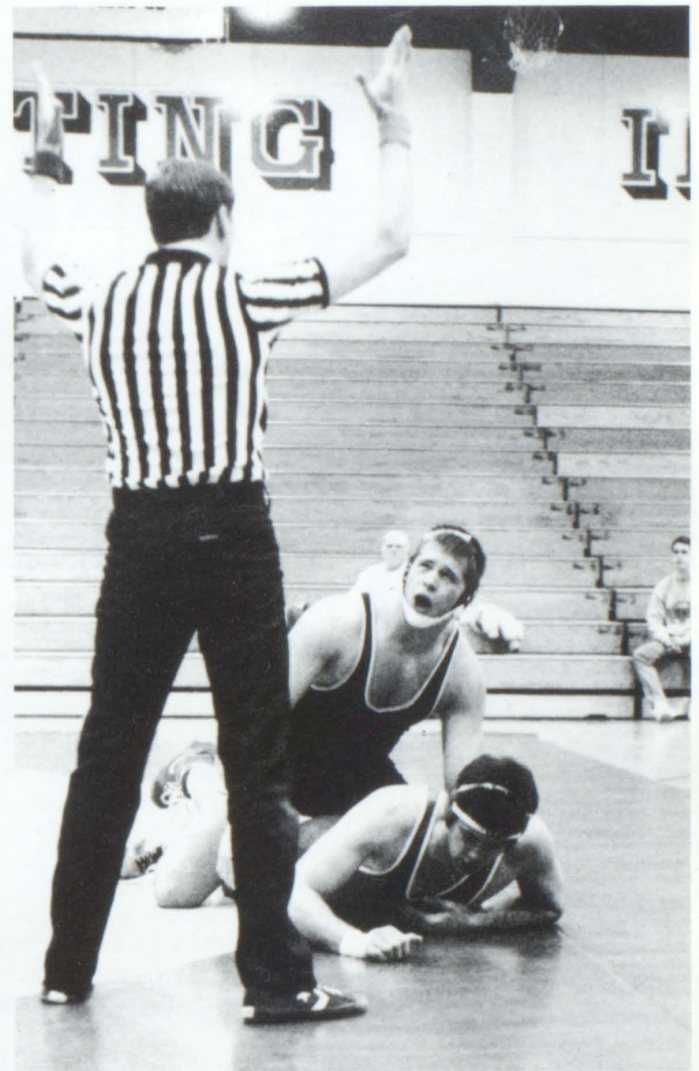

As the end of the season came, the team's intensity picked up. Aaron added, "We took the sectional and we had a lot of strong meets. Our line-up was also strong and the freshmen did a great job."

Senior, Keith Grandbois had an easy time deciding which match was his toughest. Keith commented, "Quarter finals at Semi-state was definitely my most difficult match. It was the only match in my way from going down state... I won!"

Good coaching is an important factor in any sport. Brandon, 11, sums it up with, "Coach Emerick never loses faith in us. He is always there for us even through the hard times."

TOP TEAM

Young seemed to be the word most often used to describe the girls' basketball team. Three freshman showed up on the Varsity roster. Freshmen Jill Craven, Kristina Divjak, and Jessica Mitchuson all made valuable contributions to the team. Yet the seniors took charge of the underclass-dominated team.

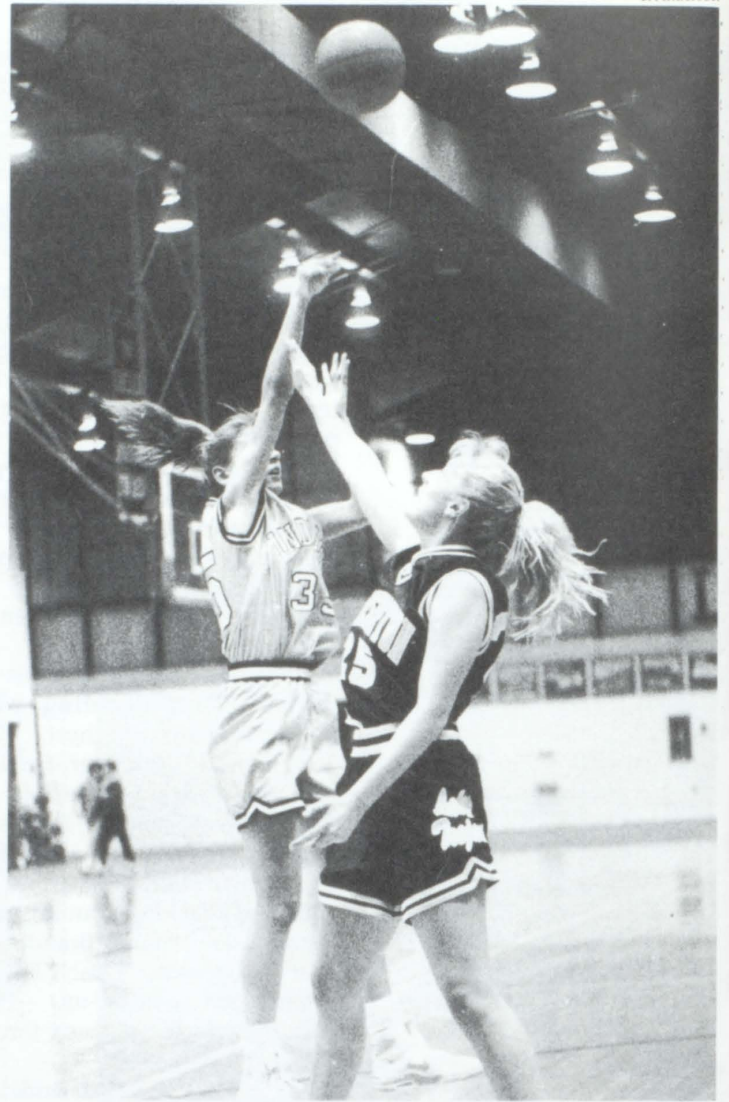

Hopes were high for the team, as was its potential. The girls lost an upsetting game against Crown Point in the Regional Championship game. But along the way, they defeated third-ranked Gary West Side. Senior Julie Miller commented, "The one thing I will always remember about this season was waking up the Sunday morning after the Regional game and reading in the newspaper Lake Central Upsets Third-ranked West Side."

Because they are only losing four seniors and have strong underclassmen, expectations are high for the upcoming year. Jill commented, "It was strange at first. I felt so young, but as time went by I felt more comfortable with the team. We learned to play together. Hopefully within the next few years, we can strengthen and become even stronger."

"We were a lot closer to one another than we have been in the past. We were a real team," stated senior Dave Carlson. The strong leadership of the upper-classmen and the friendship among team members allowed the boys' swimming team to take second in the Conference and compete in the state finals.

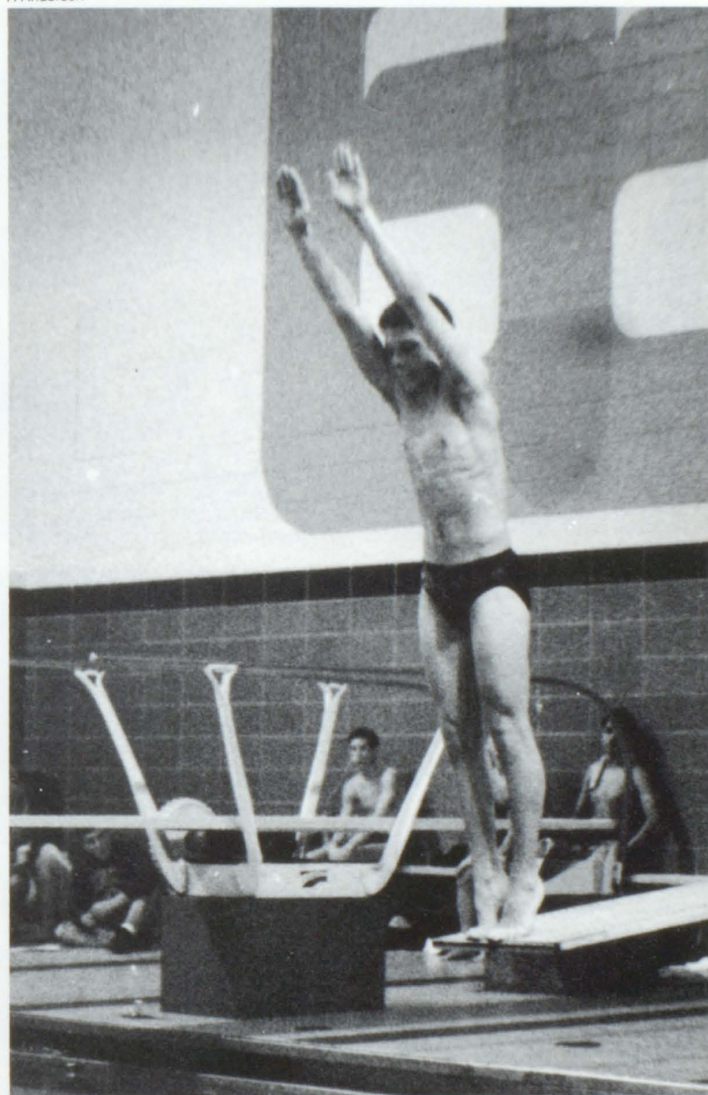

The positive mental attitude and the close one-to-one relationship between the team and coaches boosted the team's spirit. "The coaches talked to us more; they really seemed to care," observed junior Eric O'Keefe.

The team tried to keep ahead of their competition by following special high-energy diets and emphasizing mental as well as physical preparedness. Adam Pieters, 11, replied, "Everyone got the mental part of the race down--which was the most important part."

The spirit and closeness of the team helped the members to pull through even the most disappointing of defeats. "There was so much pressure for us to do well at Munster," said Jason Taylor, "The meet ended very positive, even though our toughest rival prevailed."

As for next year, Adam stated, "Never underestimate LC."

The boys' basketball team finished an outstanding season with a disappointing loss to Highland in the Sectional Championship game. Chad Smith, 12, stated, "It was a great season but Sectionals was a big disappointment. Our expectations were high and we had really hoped to go far."

Throughout the season, many improvements were made and the team gained experience in playing together. The strong offense and the tall post players are expected to guide them in the upcoming years. Todd Hardesty, 12, commented, "In the beginning of the season we were all young and inexperienced, but as the season progressed the seniors started taking leadership and we became stronger."

Some team members had certain things they would do in order to prepare themselves for games. John Vogelgesang, 11, said, "I would watch NBA All Stars with Chad before every game."

The team agreed that the season's ending was disappointing. Todd added, "I felt our team was good enough to compete with any team in the state. We had all the pieces but it all fell apart in Sectionals. Our great season was almost completely erased." by Jodie

OVER SEAS

A handful of students from the '91/'92 school year got to experience a little bit of Europe. Ten students, some of their parents, and a few LC teachers spent 10 days in France and England over Spring Break. There were some students who had Europe come to them. The exchange students also attended LC classes for their entire stay.

"The trip to France was a great experience. London was so much fun, sometimes I really wish I could go back," stated Jill Basinski (10).

"The girls that stayed with us were Turkish and we were told by our teachers we might not get along very well. It turns out that we got along perfectly, they were like sisters to us," stated Laurie Likens (11).

Roda Sarac (11) and Likens returned to Germany this past summer for a month with the students they hosted. They were very excited about returning to Germany and experiencing the German culture.

Every participant benefited from his experience. The host families became acquainted with German life, while also acquiring a lovable family member.

However the exchange students brought something with them that reached out to other LC students -- their friendship. Lori Pederson (12) commented, "I had a good experience just from meeting the foreigners because they were friendly and great to talk to."

A huge party, friends, races and cops... what do these things all have in common? A bunch of LC students at Little 500 and Grand Prix. Whether students are visiting a family member or friend, you might find a variety of LC alumni spending a weekend at IU or PU. It seems to be one big social event of high school and college friends.

Students wait all year for April to come since Grand Prix is during the beginning of the month and Little 5 is a couple weekends later. Unfortunately for seniors Little 5 happens to be on the same day as Senior Banquet. Seniors who are planning to attend both usually leave "Senior Night" after awards are distributed. Others decide to leave even a night earlier.

Jodi Sherwood ,11, stated," We left for Little 5 on Thursday after school and it seemed like we were there for a week. I felt like I was on vacation it was so fun!"

Due to the riots during 91' Little 5 cops were everywhere this time. Everything was controlled a lot closer. One student stated," Little 5 had a lot of cops out patrolling which definately helped prevent the riots." Some students may have taken part in these crazy events, others may have not, but, anyway you look at it someone was probably breaking some rules!!

Doctor's excuses, forging your unsuspecting mother's signature on notes, trying to get your absences verified.... these are just a few of the scams students pull in order to take a ditch day or two... or even eight! As the weather grows warmer, many students start to feel 'cabin fever'. The attendance list gets longer each warm day as students suddenly catch 'the 24 hour flu bug', of course, coming back the very next day either tan or sunburn from the beach or all rested up from laying around all day. Granted, almost everyone tries to get away with at least one ditch day. Freshmen, who usually have no way of transportation to and from school (besides the bus) therefore they don't have 'easy access' to ditch. Weird instances of ditching have been reported. For example, one teacher stated, "Two freshmen were ditching one hour of a class and I found them in the bathroom standing on the toilets in the stall." Now, how can one hour or better yet 55 minutes be so bad?? No one will ever know. Sophomores on the other hand usually have their license by the end of the year—but aren't allowed to drive to school. Somehow they find some dumb way to leave if they're fortunate enough to know some nice upperclassman that's willing to ditch with them. Juniors, well having your car sitting in the parking lot, calling your name, is a real temptation. Needless to say, a big group of juniors then proceed out into the parking lot and swarm to one person's house for a pool party or cookout. There's no need to give a reason why many seniors use all eight days before school's out. Ditching goes with the territory' when you're a senior! It's a given!

So whatever your reason may be, a ditch day now and then never hurt anyone! (unless you get caught).

Suddenly it was already Prom. It seems like just yesterday we were preparing for and attending winter formal. Now it's time to prepare for another "big day." All week girls have plans everyday to get everything accomplished. All the necessities needed for the dance with so much to do. The days fly by quicker than usual. Jen Krupa 12, said "It's one day before prom and I still have tons to do! There's not enough hours in a day!" Soon enough it was 10:30 a.m. Friday, May 8. Cars flood out of the parking lot filled with people attending prom with their off-campus permits all ready to prepare for the dance. Hair appointments, manicures, tanning appointments, picking up the flowers, and getting film all have to be accomplished by at least 5 p.m. As hours dwindle away your date is already standing on your front porch with your flowers, ringing the doorbell. Is it already time? Round up everything-camera, lipstick, purse, flowers, anything you could possibly think of. After many pictures being taken, you're off to the dance to take even more pictures!! At the dance, dinner was served around 7 p.m; after dinner was dancing. "Overall the night was really fun." stated Lisa Mordi, 10. The King and Queen were announced, they were Chris Lesniewski & Kari Federoff. Prom theme was 'Everything I do, I do it for you.' After all the planning, anticipation, and organization for prom- the theme fit well.

After the magical Prom evening comes to a close, couples await the excitement and fun that is yet to come. Although the actual dance itself has ended, the weekend has only just begun.

The weekend begins with students stammering out of bed, bright and early ready to head toward the infamous Turkey Run. LC students were sighted hiking, canoeing, bicycling, horseback riding, Barbecuing, and swimming. Regardless, there was no relaxation on this outing. Andrea Paterson, 12, commented, "I didn't get home on Prom night until 6 am, and we met to go to the Turkey Run at 8 am. Talk about exhausted!! But, I had a great time, and I would do it all over again if I could."

Sunday. Day two. After virtually no rest, students again departed early for an adventurous day at Marriott's Great America. Couples fled to the amusement park to ride the rides, watch the shows, shop at the stores, and eat at the restaurants. The main attraction this year was the new Batman ride. Students waited in line for hours at a time to ride the main event. Jodi Sherwood, 11, stated, "The best part of the whole weekend was having everyone together. It was a blast because many of my friends didn't go to the dance and we got to spend the whole weekend together as a group."

Monday. Day three. Some felt it was necessary to take this day off of school. Many students slept in and spent a relaxing day at home, while the more energetic went to the beach, the zoo, or to a friend's house. Nevertheless, prom weekend is an event that will vividly be remembered by all who participated in the excitement.

A solid and talented underclass pitching staff was one of many key factors in the success of the baseball team. With only three returning players on the Varsity roster, seniors Shawn Donovan, Dan Penn, and Jeff Stephens, the team knew it had much work in store for the season. Shawn stated, "At the beginning of the season, positions were not yet set. By mid-season we all seemed to be more confident in our positions and each other."

Despite these setbacks, they knew that Highland would definitely be "the team to beat." Knowing the strength of their competition, the team hoped to overcome them and earn the title of Conference Champs. Unfortunately, Highland had the edge. Junior Matt Harger observed, "Highland was a very difficult team to beat. They were able to pull themselves together and come out on top, so we were unable to defeat them."

Despite the disappointment of losing Conference, the Indians felt they had many strengths. Junior Kyle Woods said, "When it comes to our team, hitting is the key. We have a quality pitching staff, but a very inexperienced one. That inexperience can come into play later in the game so it is always a great help to have a lead."

The team agrees that the prospects for next year's team look good. The number of experienced players returning is higher than in former years, and experience is the key to success.

After beginning their season with the precompetition Winter Warriors training camp, it was not surprising that the girls' track team placed first in the conference. Team members devoted their afternoons from November to March preparing for the competitive track season. As Noreen Bernacki, 11, stated, "Track is a commitment—not just a sport. Those who wanted to reach their full potential during the season were the people who started giving up their after-school time in November to prepare for meets in June."

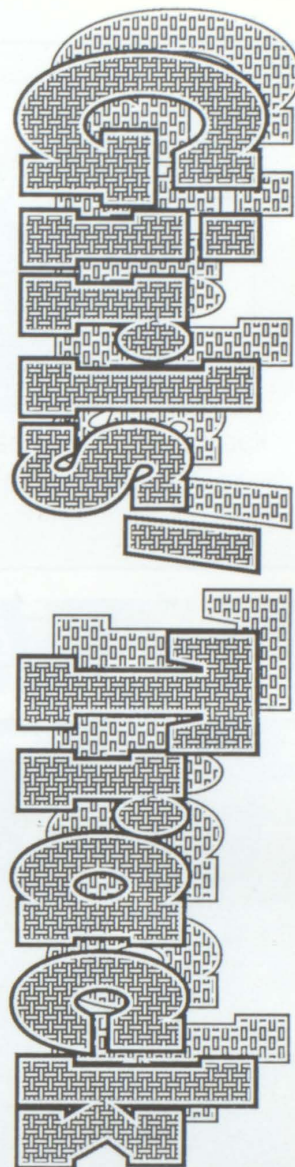

The goal of track was to strengthen and improve. "I'd try to throw one foot better each meet," commented Jamie Draper, 9.

Some of the most memorable moments were not those of personal victory or of breaking a record, they were memories of embarrassment. Junior Laura Kisala remembers "falling on my face at the finish line of the 400 at an indoor meet."

Michele Marthakis, 12, recalls the time "when Laurie Kobeske threw 112 feet at Valparaiso and we ran across the field only to miss each other on a high-five."

About next year's team, Laurie Kobeske, 11, remarked, "We are losing some great team members, but we will gain new people, so time can only tell."

It's Sunday afternoon and the tv's on. What's the one sport that drives people to turn off the tv? Golf! But why? Golfers may not wear protective gear or have hilarious locker room stories, but they can have fun too. In what other sport does one play cards to win golf tees and travel to such exotic places as Potawattomie?

Sports are what you make of them whether it's baseball, deep sea diving, or golf. Every meet has its ups and downs and you can't always win, but the golf team gave the Conference a run for money this season. Despite losing two All-Conference players to graduation, the team held its own. Freshman Doug Mason, as well as Mark Koch, Joe Stavitzke, and Andy Tiebel, led the team with their example of hard work and competitiveness.

The competition—difficult. Considering the fact that the team was always up against an unpredictable opponent—the weather. One day it was bright and sunny with record high temperatures in the 80's and the next it was 50 degrees. Nevertheless, the golf team waded through the puddles, dodged the snow, and sweated through the season. With a few practices under their belts and golf tees in hand, the team started off the season with the Michigan City Marquette Invitational and placed sixth -- a respectable position for a golf tournament. The team only continued to work harder and developed a good foundation for next year.

The girls' varsity softball team had the talent and the skill to compete with any team in the area and in the state. With an almost undefeated record, the girls had high hopes for competing in the state tournament. Cara Greene, 12, commented, "We have a great team. We work well together and hopefully our hard work will help us to advance in the state tournament." The team had many returning players on the varsity roster. Lana Damron, 12, stated, "Losing our catcher coming into this year was a big loss, but Stephanie Ziemak stepped in with no problem."

The teams dedication was a huge factor in their success. They practiced long hours on the fundamentals and key areas of problems.

The team went into their season knowing that they would be the team to beat. After beating all of the area teams, the girls had no doubt that Sectionals would be a breeze.

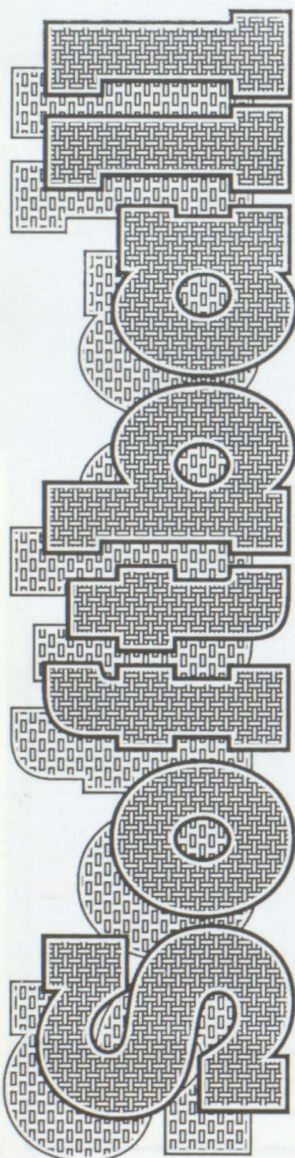

Sophomore Kelly Ross commented, "Our opponents knew we would be a very difficult team to beat. Even with them knowing that, we were still able to come out on top."

Expectations remain high for next year's team. Junior Missy Chorba added, "We are losing five valluable players next year, but we are all confident that next year we will still be the team to beat."

The weather was about as close to perfect as it was going to get considering how none of the meets had seen temperatures above 50 degrees and it always rained. Nevertheless, there was no turning back. The buses were loaded with everyone from shot putters to sprinters and coaches were frantically trying to figure out which bus the starting blocks were on and who had the medical kit. Sometime later-- the buses pulled out of the parking lot and off to Calumet. The boys' track team was off to defend their "two-year running" title of Conference Champs. The bus arrives. The bus unloads and the team disperses in all directions. Discus throwers are off to the ring and runners warm up. First calls are made and the meet begins. With no scores being announced periodically, everyone nervously wonders "who's in first." With the meet dragging on because girls' Conference was being held at the same time, anticipation-- and hunger-- could be seen in the team's faces. Thank goodness for the donut shop across the street. The meet was winding down and everyone was praying the weather would hold-- yeah right. With two events left-- it poured. The relay teams could barely see the track let alone make a hand-off they were soaking wet before the relay even started, and the lanes were flooded. The outcome? It ended in a relay victory and a "3-peat" in Conference. For the Seniors-- what a way to go.

Got a racquet -- got a ball, come on LC win 'em all! With four returning seniors and many dedicated underclassman, the girls' tennis team was psyched for a good season. Intense practices were held every day. Dana Boskovich, 12, stated, "I take practices very seriously. Every day I try to find something else to improve on." Challenge matches were held to determine positions and get ready for the other competitive schools. Because the lineup was often inconsistent, the team had to adjust their positions. Fortunately, many of the girls were interchangeable and worked well together.

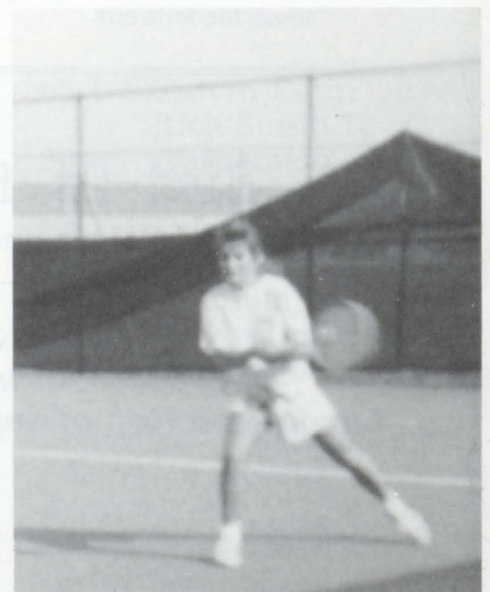

The new coaches, Mr. Holden and Ms. Linz, were extremely dedicated. They were also a positive addition to the team. Maryanne Kumiega, 12, stated, "I think this season is by far the best, because the coaches really care. The coach takes time to work with the players to help them improve."

The year was filled with many personal victories. Every player set goals in order to improve. Julie Miller, 12, stated, "Beating Munster's doubles team was a tremendous victory and a great confidence builder." Kim Lutes, 11, stated, "This year both the players and the coaches communicated. This enabled everyone to enjoy playing and to do their best" The JV team worked hard this year in preparation for the years to come. The ability and dedication this year proved to be successful for the tennis team.

Playing doubles involves great team work. Julie Miller hits a backhand, then rushes to the net for a volley.

Maryanne Kumiega concentrates on perfecting her serve. Constant practice is involved for the perfect placement and technique of each serve.

Many lasting friendships are form throughout the season. Team members count on each other for support on and off the court. As for next year the girls will form a similar bond allowing for a great new year.

The soccer team had high hopes which eventually turned into reality. The season started out strong with a 4 to 2 win over Hammond High and continued with a 3- nothing shut-out over Gavit. Early success was a surprise to many. Coach Pollen stated, "We have a very young team and need to really work. A vast majority of our starters graduated last year, but we still intend to play hard."

Senior starter Sedat Supurgesi hoped for a good season, "It's my senior year and I intend to play my best. This is my last year here and I would love to take conference."

Luck was with the team as they shut out Crown Point with a 2- nothing victory. The Indians held the Munster Mustangs to one goal and eventually evened out the score. Matt Braatz, 11, stated, "Munster was a tough team. We had to play a very defensive game in order to hold them to one goal."

Sophomore Jill Bonaguro gave a new perspective to a normally all male soccer team. She usually started JV but has gotten her share of varsity playing time. "The guys on our team were extremely supportive. They made sure no one gave me too much trouble on or off the field. Being the only member of an all male soccer team has given me greater respect for the opposite sex."

Despite the popular belief that witches are cruel, Ms. Dana Novak proves to be quite the helpful witch by assisting a needy student.

Unaware of the sneaky photographer, Ms. Christine Grey shows off her mask for fellow staff members. Halloween participants made the day exciting.

Spooky holidays break habits

Halloween was not only a time for students to let loose, but teachers got involved too. Many felt that it would bring a little more excitement to the ordinary day if they participated in festivities. By doing so, the once normal art teacher became...yes, a helpful witch.

Students dressed variously as goblins, males became females, and many girls displayed spider pantyhose. Through out the halls an overwhelming amount of screechy noises were heard. Many pranks were played among friends to live up to Halloween traditions in the past.

Students and teachers together agreed that Halloween brought excitement to a day that was not only set aside for youngsters.

Most students felt it was great that teachers took the time to participate in the festivities. "It made the day more exciting fun because we could laugh at them instead of being serious all the time like usual," stated one art student. "I dressed up because it was Halloween. I kept it low key as not to interrupt the educational process. I felt kind of goofy and lighthearted, but Halloween is a day to do those things. It is important to have humor in your day," laughed Ms. Gray.

TEACHERS 'BREAK' ALL THE RULES

Making each class unique was the best part of getting all new teachers and classes at the beginning of the year. Teachers agree that each class has something about it that will never be forgotten. New ideas often evolve from these unique experiences. One which came about in Ms. Laurie Ragland's class was home court. When someone says something bad, the class is supposed to say home court and say something bad back. Most students agreed this was a good way to liven up the class, but still carry on normally.

In Ms. Pam Miller's fourth hour English class, if one misbehaves he has to sit next to her. Miller states that some of them spend so much quality time with her that people will think they have become her naturally born children.

Mr. Randy Fenters often has cut-low contests with his students. The first week of school he told them that if they were ever caught sleeping he would put their hand in a bowl of warm water. Although, it hasn't proven true the old garbage can trick has been used several times.

In order to keep students awake in econ, Mr. Lee Paris makes the guilty sleeper stand up in the back of the room. Tracy Wozniak(12) commented, "Luckily I've been fortunate enough not to stand."

No matter what everyone managed to 'break all the rules'.

Teachers take time off

When the word teacher comes to mind, most teenagers think boring, stuffy people who spend their lives at LC. Well, just because teachers are perceived in this manner doesn't mean all of LC's teachers' lives revolve around school.

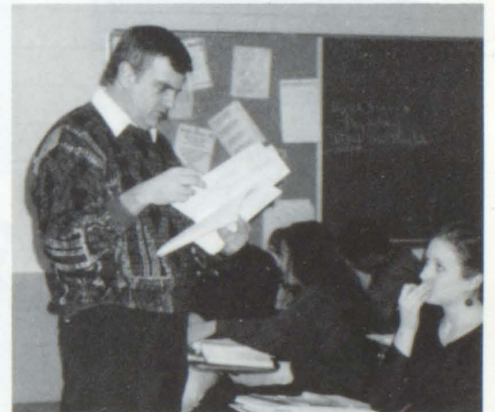

To prove this point, teachers were sought out and then caught in action while doing things away from LC's curriculum. Ms. Sandy Bushong, LC's art teacher, was caught having a ball at one of the newest malls, Gurnie Mills, during Thanksgiving break. She was enjoying a blissful day of eating and shopping.

Not only was Bushong caught, but many teachers were spotted doing aerobics in the cafeteria foyer after school on several occasions. While getting some exercise, the teachers loved to catch up on the latest gossip. Giggling and laughing, the teachers have a ball at aerobics after school.

When given the chance, LC's teachers love to "Break all the Rules" just like the students.

Unaware of the opposing camera, Ms. Sandy Bushong takes time out from shopping at the new Gurnie Mills Mall to eat a two-foot long hot dog with a friend from high school. Students also used the shopping trip as a way to get some early gifts for Christmas.

Teachers were caught doing what they do best: teaching. Various methods were used to keep the classroom exciting.

Frosh Stress

Freshmen year often starts off filled with hopes, dreams, and especially fears. Locker combinations, upperclassmen, and new and unusual people are often enough to scare away many adults let alone 14 - and-15- year - olds. Along with the usual first day of school jitters comes a feeling of pride. Middle school days are far behind, only the long road to adulthood lies ahead. A feeling of belonging to a bigger picture and of growing up are inevitable. The next four years are often referred to as the best times of one's life. Yet, according to the people actually living it, that statement is quite debateable. The term papers, passing periods and lunch lines are, for the most part, a new and exciting experience - - just a prelude to what is yet to come.

Ricky Martinez 9, collapses over the sheer agony of freshmen year.

Freshman Firsts

One major freshman fear is understanding the basic procedures for the LC dances. As for all of the upperclassmen, it becomes less of a worry, but for now it can be pretty nerve racking. Most freshmen just want to get through it without making any major mistakes. Just exactly who buys the flowers? Do guys wear a tux for Homecoming? Are my dance moves up to date? HELP! One freshman, Lisa Gonzales stated, "I was so nervous that someone would have the same dress as I did."

Stephanie Franzen ,9, felt that one major worry was just fitting in with everyone else.

At last everything started to fall into place. Just when dresses were bought, reservations were made, and excitement started to build, something still goes wrong. What happens if you and your dream date broke up? Or your dress that you bought three months ago doesn't fit? Though nothing is ever perfect, freshmen manage to muddle through it. Even though everything seems confusing at first, it eventually improves. Before you knew it, people were shopping for Winter Formal dates.

Bonnie Levin and friends prepare for their first LC homecoming.

Skip Palka, 10, finds it necessary to liven up his class with some silly shenanigans.

Amber Lopez, 10, and friends put their heads together sparking summer energy.

Sophomores Heather Graham and Amy Mc Cormick flock to The Paragon where it is tradition to gather after a performance.

Good friends are something to be treasured, Laura Penn, 10, and Mike Oster, 10, display the quality of their friendship.

Sophomores Score

With the homecoming float competition being based somewhat on seniority, it was a pleasant surprise for some when the sophomores tied for first place with the seniors. With help of the sponsors, Mrs. Rosinski and Mrs. Platt, the activities were much more organized and the quality was much better than in the past. Mrs. Rosinski said, "I really enjoyed the kids' creativity and enthusiasm."

The large indian in a boxing ring was very realistic. Mr. Graham and his wife designed the float, and allowed the kids to use their backyard to build it. "This is the first time in awhile that anyone has tied the seniors - especially sophomores!"

With at least twenty students showing up every time, they all showed a lot of school spirit, and really got the job done. Anne Renzino, 10, said, "We put in a lot of effort to make it the best it could possibly be. It worked so well, because we all wanted one thing - to win!"

Randall Rose, 10, proudly mounts on top of his car that he named "Harold".

Whether it is drivers education, or receiving licenses, turning sixteen becomes an obsession. Hundreds of sophomores have been waiting to get their licenses ever since they could say the word "car". Rich Hills, 10, commented, "I am really anxious about getting my license, I already have my car and everything."

Nick Lazzaro, 10, already had problems with his newborn license. "I just got my license four months ago and I already have a ticket!"

Although few sophomores actually have their licenses, many have enrolled in a drivers training course. Rick Hemphill, 10, stated, "What I learned in drivers education will be useful towards my driving experience."

Others didn't get as much out of the course. Rich Hills argued, "I didn't learn anything substantial at all, and I highly doubt that I will be applying any of the skills that I didn't learn."

Whatever the situation, students just wanted their license ASAP! Valerie Malsch, 10, said, "I am extremely excited, especially since I have to depend on my friends and family for my present means of transportation."

SURFING ON SNOW

A lot of people enjoy spending a great deal of their time skiing in the winter, but only a few have experienced the sport of snowboarding. Snowboarding has been said to be very similar to skateboarding and that is why sophomore Mike Harasty became interested. Mike began snowboarding six years ago after he saw it being done on television, he has learned quite a few tricks since then. Mike explained, "I go snowboarding seven or eight times a winter, to anywhere it is cold. In the summer, I tried sandboarding, but you don't go as fast on sand."

Snowboarding was a pretty expensive hobby for Mike. He had two of his own boards, plus he had to suffer with the cost of a lift ticket every time he went. Mike was never in any competitions, and doesn't wish to. Snowboarding was something that Mike chose to do purely for fun, and his message to anyone wanted to try it was- "Always wear three pairs of socks because you'll never know when your feet will get cold."

7:26 The sound of screeching tires fills my ears as 300 cars full of kids try to beat the final bell.

7:30 I slide into my seat in Psychology to hear about homecourt.

8:25 On to English! Oh No! A timed writing! "Explain what courage means to you." It means I have 45 minutes to rack my brain and scribble something down on paper.

9:35 Chemistry class! Pop Quiz. Forget it, I'm dead.

10:40 In the middle of an Algebra II test, Mr. Zajack is still complaining that we have got to get it together! My slopes just don't seem to be sloping.

11:05 Lunch! I'm starving. My turkey salad appears to be turkeyless. I'll just smother it in croutons and French dressing.

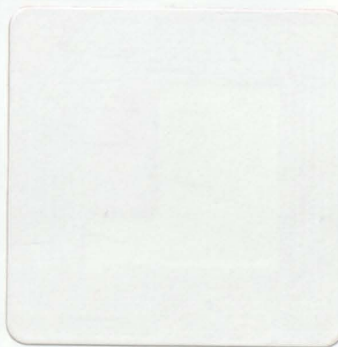

12:10 Mr. Clark is telling us Vietnam stories again. I guess it's better than learning about Reconstruction.

12:35 Oh, a pass? Why do I have to see my principal?

1:30 Hard at work on freshman pictures for Quiver (That's better than the principal's office). Oh No! I haven't even written it let alone typed it! The clock seems to stand still.

2:05 Time to go home! What a day, I'm going back to bed!

Not freshmen, not sophomores, but impatient juniors; soon to be the seniors. Junior year is a preparation for the long awaited responsibilities they will soon face as "upperclassmen." By this time juniors are comfortable with LC's atmosphere, its rules and procedures, and they are starting to feel a sense of superiority. At one time, they followed the rules, but now they know how to break them and get away with it.

To some the thought of ruling the school becomes so overwhelming, they forget that they are still juniors. In these cases, the seniors set them straight and politely remind them they have one more year. Though the juniors are not yet seniors, this is still an enjoyable year. It is filled with many different events from the ones they had experienced last year. Dawn Perusich states, "Next year, as seniors, we will dominate over sports, getting dance tickets, and every underclassman." This year juniors are able to get a hint of what is in store for them next year, at the top.

by Bridget Levin

Josh Yager(11) and Jason Taylor(11) were juniors, whose attitudes easily fit in with the future senior way of life.

L. Pederson

"Can I borrow your hair spray?"

"Sure, do you have a brush?"

"I need lipstick?"

These are a few statements often heard as girls rush into classrooms and crowd into bathrooms to check the hair and make-up situation. Since the beginning of time, males have scoffed at female's obsession with their appearance. Many guys feel it is unnecessary to apply make-up every hour on the hour. Kyle Woods commented, "I don't know what some of these girls are trying to prove, if you're ugly you're ugly, make-up is not going to perform miracles."

Several teachers are irritated when girls bring out beauty supplies during class. One chemistry teacher stated, "Not only is it unsanitary to comb hair in class, it also shows a considerable amount of bad taste." One junior added, "It is cool to put on make-up in all my classes, but in my fourth hour chemistry class, I'd rather have my hair a mess and my make-up dripping down my face, than deal with that man!"

Many girls do not see what all the fuss is about. One frustrated junior explained, "I'd rather get caught putting on make-up in class than try to fight my way through the bathrooms. One time when I was putting on lipstick, someone bumped me and I wound up with lipstick in my nose. Never again!" Dedra Kuglin has a simple alternative, "I never apply make-up here, the light in this school is terrible anyway!"

Ms. Ragland tells Sedat Supurgeci that her future is bright enough that she has to wear shades.

Great Day for Shades

On September 20 the Spirit Team sponsored "The Future's So Bright You've Got to Wear Your Shades Day." This day allowed students to wear sunglasses all day. As usual the rules in the classroom still were up to the teacher. Most of the teachers allowed the students to wear the sunglasses.

Ms. Lori Ragland, sponsor of the Spirit Team also participated in Shades Day. Ragland stated, "Yes we would do it again." Only about four out of 10 students participated. Although few shades were visible, some were classic and some outrageous, and most agreed they'd like to see the event continued.

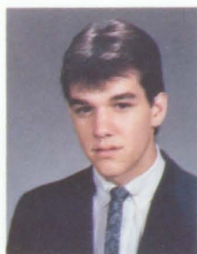

Shades day offered something different, with the idia coming from a song. It was really fun day to be able to wear shades in school and to "Break All the Rules."

Jeannie, although you are not here to read this, we want you to know you have added so much to so many lives, we only hope we have added that to yours. You are in our hearts and in our prayers. You will be missed and loved forever.

Jeannie not only had a love for music, but for people as well. As a peer helper she guided many students in the right direction. She always managed to do her best to help anyone in need. Most of us agree that her greatest gift of all was her friendship.

Dana Pollen--Truly you have been a joy to us for the past eighteen years. Below is a list of the top ten things we will miss most about you.
The Q-Tip carpeted bathroom floor.
Thanksgiving's award winning "Turkey."
The custom paint job of your room.
The weak glass in our bedroom window.
The recession in the box spring industry.
Your excellent canoe instructions.
Your "how could that have happened to anyone!"
Your stealth moves early in the morning.
Your ability to scent driveways with expensive cologne.
Your smiling face and easy going temperament, your generosity and fiery spirit, your delightful and vivacious personality.

Best of luck and all our love!!!

Mom & Dad

At This Point...

we're feeling the stress

This is the End...

Five more days until your last interim report comes out. Finally! A sure sign school's almost out.

Four more weeks of school left. Prom weekend is over & Quiver has only 55 pages left to do!

Three more weeks of school- Students get the temptation to "Break the Rules" and to lay out on the beach all day.

Two more days of school- turn in text books and/or take your last final. The sun is shining & the weather is great outside.

One more thing to say... school's out! Have a great summer! And always remember...

Senior Banquet - A night to remember while being surrounded by the best of friends or getting acquainted with old friends you haven't seen in awhile.

Senior Banquet A Night to Remember

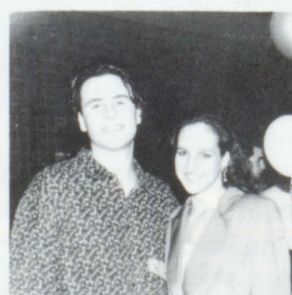

Friday April 24, as seniors arrived home from school, they got prepared for the evening of socializing and dancing while being with their best friends or with the friends they have lost touch with over the years. What is the special occasion you ask? It's Senior Banquet!

For most seniors, the night started out fairly smooth, while others had obstacles to overcome. Take our night for example- Kelly Linz came over to my house and we were all ready to leave when we realized she locked her keys in the car. Great! So Jen Krupa decided to drive. Jen stated, "The whole night was so hilarious. It not only started out funny, it ended with something funny." Finally we arrived at our destination. "Senior banquet was really a fun night. I had a great time," said Jackie Govert. The whole Senior Class being together, not having to deal with the annoying attitudes of underclassmen. ONE night to enjoy and always remember. Time to visit with all the people you haven't had the chance to in a while, due to busy or conflicting schedules. Some seniors were taking group pictures. Dinner was served at 7p.m. The menu included chicken, corn, meatballs, salad, lasagna, potatoes and bread. Awards were handed out after dinner. After the awards were distributed, people took more group pictures, then the dancing started. The temperature rose in the building as people hit the dance floor. Sweat dripped off of the dancing bodies.

As the night rolled on, it was already time to leave. We collected our key chains with 'LCHS- 'Class of 92' printed on them. Senior banquet- definitely a night to remember!!

At Last... Graduation!

It's over, the grand finale, we've come to the point in our lives we've all been waiting for... yes, it's graduation! June 4th, at the Star Plaza Theater will be the last time all 484 seniors are in the same room. Now it's time to face the 'real world' off to college, full time jobs or whatever your plans may be.

Senior year passed by extremely quick, the 'fun' filled year packed with things to accomplish such as: Homecoming, Winter Formal, Prom, Senior banquet, Awards night, Graduation, ditch days and how can anyone forget term papers or exit outcome tests? We are at the top of the totem pole and in less than two months we will be back at the bottom, as freshmen in college or the 'new' kid on the job. It's time to experience adult responsibilities.

Graduation is a time for all to reflect back and realize how much they have matured or changed. Four years of making new friends and holding on to friends for the future. Eric Popa responded to the word 'graduation' in one single word, "FREEDOM!".

What we've all been waiting for. Of course!

As the year comes to an end, seniors pass out graduation party announcements and sign yearbook 'things'. For some, these signatures may not be looked at again for years, then suddenly—there's a reunion!

Nothing like water balloons in the parking lot.

It was that time of year when Seniors had had "Senioritis" for about five months now, Juniors started to insist they were seniors and rule the school, Sophmores felt cool because they are almost upper classmen and Freshmen didn't have to worry about having their locker in lower E-hall. These were all good signs of the 91-92 school year coming to an end.

On Tuesday the students had their final locker check. Garbage cans everywhere were overflowing with paper! Mr. Newell even thanked us for our cooperation! The rest of the week was basically cramming in last minute "information" that teachers insisted was on our exams. At last the final days had come. Seniors were happy to have graduated high school but, on the other hand a bit sad knowing they are in the big world now and may never see a lot of those LC faces again. The rest of the students were just happy knowing summer was finally here. The school year came to an end as the 2:05 bell rang and LC Alumni's We're Outta Here!!

OUR STAFF

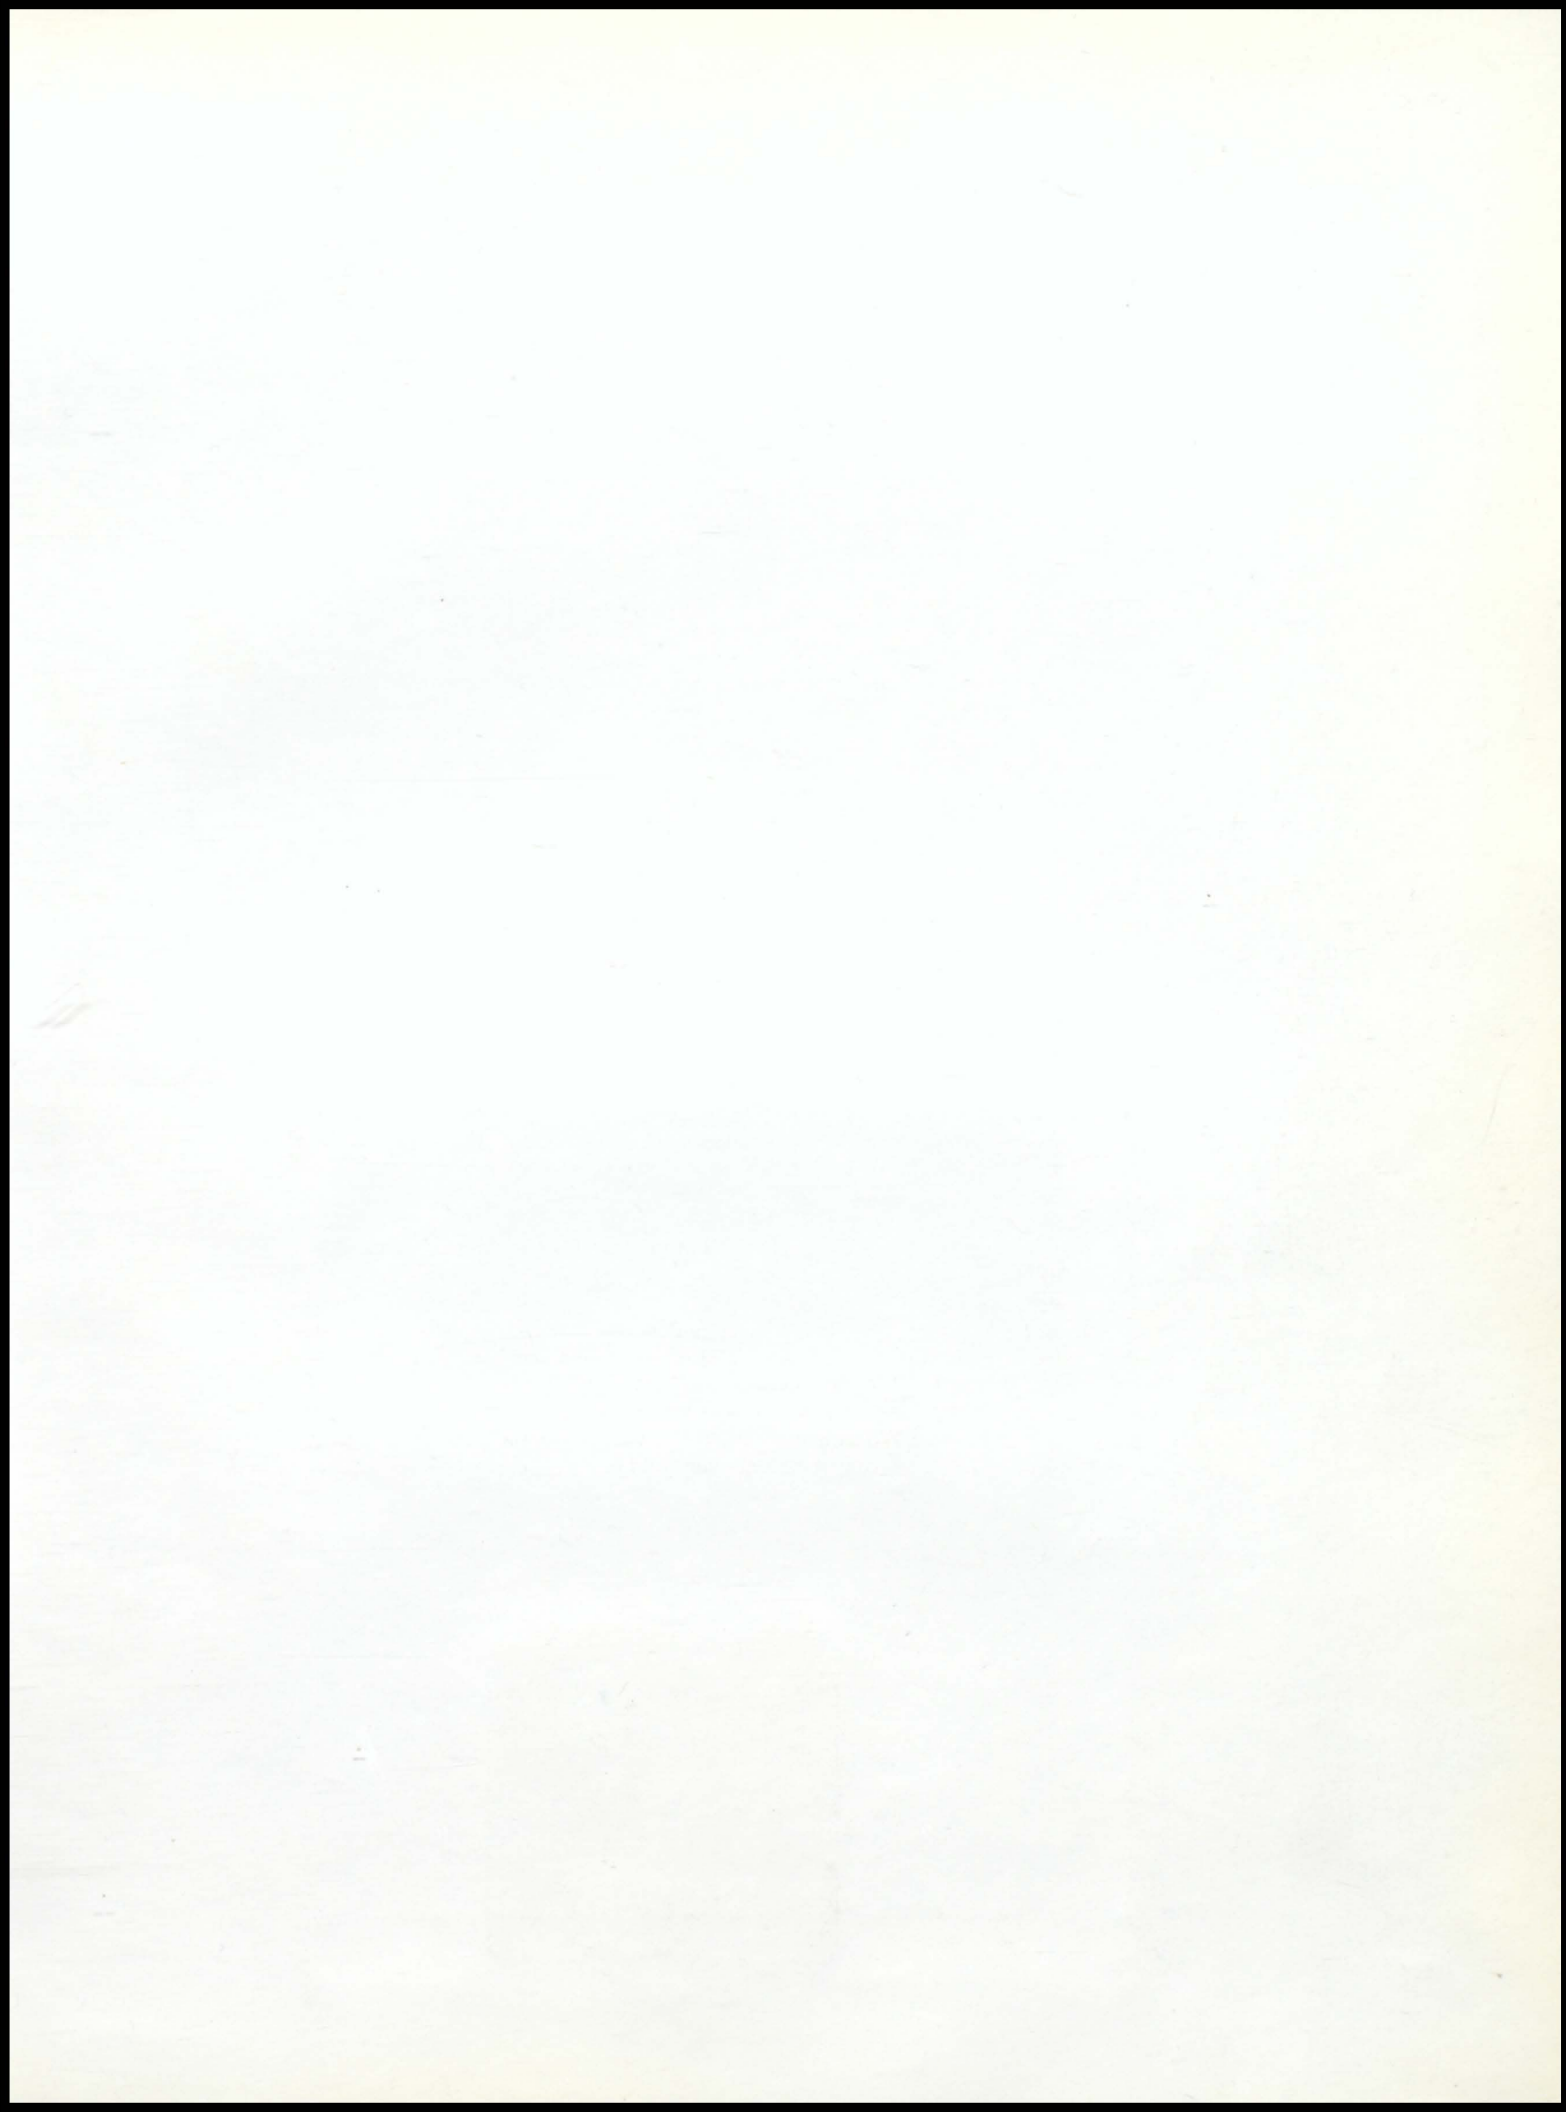

Mrs. Hewlett

As I sit and observe in my new orange desk, I will take you through 'A day in the life of Quiver staff'. The 1:10 bell rings as noise fills the room while staff files in. Considering we have 36 on staff it's not as loud as usual. Jason Turner comes up to me and asks faithfully every day, "Are there any errands I can run for you?" "No, thanks anyway" I reply. Heather Hogan is working vigorously on her pages. She's a great worker and staff next year is lucky to have her. I glance around the room for Christie Wilson. She's in the darkroom (of course) developing the film for my publications page. Uh oh! Problem in the darkroom. Sarah Donaldson aids Christie because Christie claims her film just will not roll! Sarah is barefoot- aren't feet and toes the ugliest growths on the human body? Even though Sarah's toes look just like mine- and that's scary! As deadline approaches Bridget Levin, Julie Wright, Jen Frierhood and Jen Zych yap away— staying unusually calm and cool. Patty Boersma and Meghan Diekman come up to my desk to ask yet another question about layout design- it's great they're trying, considering they're photographers and all. I continue observing, Jenn Adams has a question for me about her pages. Jenn has learned a lot this year, I guess being aides together during fifth hour has helped a lot. Anna Standafer and Amy Basinski are at the Mac's designing headlines for their pages. Lana Kretich and Ryan Anderson sit in the back of the room writing out receipts for subscriptions turned in. Ryan, I will always remember when I asked you for pictures of homecoming when we were on deadline and you replied, "I AM NOT A PHOTOGRAPHER! I am the business manager!" Meghan has just announced to me she now knows how to use a computer. Well, hey, that's great! Tracey Wozniak and Nikki Graham look as if they are busy, but actually they're discussing senior banquet awards. Noreen Bernacki is searching through pictures for her page. Quiver is suddenly quiet- What's going on here? Angel Fugate, Robin Rudinski and Jodi Stephans are also on the Mac's working on sports pages. BIG deadlines for them. They are doing a good job though. Tara Morales and Amy Hart are working on the index. We got a new program this year for the index, I would say they're adjusting well. Sandie Jenkins- if I could describe her in just one word- valuable! Sandie has helped us out tremendously as we make deadlines. She put all the typesheets on the disk to go to the company- this procedure takes much patience. Heather Corty just walked out the dark room. She's printing away. Michelle Vonderhaar and Jen Rash are at a table working on their layout for their page. Angie Ljuboja just walked into the room. As she digs through our cabinet (for god knows what) I think of all the knowledge she's absorbed just this year. Ang, always remember the 'quiet time' we needed in Quiver class. Andrea Fideli is working next to Angie also on her pages. I will never forget signing the senior scroll. Lori Pederson, always remember when you said, "Look Cindy" and pulled out a thick black marker. Of course, we had the darkest signatures!! Jessica Ward, Dawn Gerhke and Tonia Fassoth all graduated at semester, but finished the color senior section. Karyn Kiel is preparing her preliminary for her page. She is also gathering pictures for the page. Julie Stewart worked on staff first semester and did a wonderful job on the faculty section with Nikki. Even though Heather Balka isn't on staff, we worked during fifth hour together. She helped me tremendously and I will always remember your help and never will forget when you would manually feed the printer across the hall!! I would also like to thank Steven Wozniewski for printing the many pictures for me in fifth hour. It was well appreciated! I think we've had a great year and I had lots of fun 'Breaking all the Rules!!'

The 1992 Quiver was printed by Herff Jones yearbooks in Mission, Kansas. The four-color lithograph cover was student oriented and studio drawn. The book was printed on 80 lb. gloss paper with the exception of the senior section, which was printed on 100 lb. Eurogloss paper. The student-designed end sheet utilized Pearlescent Steel Blue and Black inks. Copy is 10 point Palatino Disk submitted on Typemaster. All headlines were designed by staff using the Typestyler and Freehand programs on the Macintosh computer. Senior and underclass photos were taken by Root photographers.
